Bears Say, "Woe Is Me, Alhama."
Unpleasant Warnings.
Governor Smith, Sure.
The Toad Sees Coolidge.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

MR. RASKOB is coming home from Europe. The Bears, groaned a bitter groan, General Motors went up to 205, first crossing of the 200 Rubicon, and Wall Street again administered punishment, cruel, unusual and unconstitutional to the short sellers.

Again the enthusiastic bought more than four million shares, and again the bears learned that selling anything in this country short, is dangerous.

Buy something good, not more than you can pay for, and keep it. DON'T GAMBLE.

UNPLEASANT warning, but necessary.

The Federal government sees danger of another outbreak of infantile paralysis this summer. Dr. Harris, New York's health officer, warns against danger of spinal meningitis.

THESE diseases, puzzling to science, are as mysterious as were yellow fever and malaria, before men discovered that mosquitoes, and nothing else, spread both.

WHILE waiting for definite information, do these things:

Screen doors and windows, using copper screen, that it may last.

Keep flies away from babies and young children, and away from their food.

Pasteurize or boil children's milk. Give foods rich in vitamin content.

TEACH children not to put fingers in the mouth or nose—wash their hands well before meals. Teach children that kissing is dangerous, especially on the lips.

And let adults know that their kissing should be limited to their own children. Every adult mouth and throat carries disease germs, latent, that might work havoc in a young child with undeveloped leucocytes protection.

SENATOR WALSH retires from the race for the Democratic nomination gracefully in favor of Gov. Al Smith.

So far as Democrats are concerned, the nomination is settled. Gov. Smith is Democratic presidential candidate for 1928.

REPUBLICANS, of whom some, including the high finance contingent, would like to be rid of Hoover, begin to search their souls and think twice about it. Popularity, A NAME THAT THE PEOPLE KNOW, is a power not to be neglected. Gov. Smith has proved that people know him on the Atlantic and on the Pacific. And Secretary Hoover has done the same.

THE anti-Hoover Republicans are worrying, for "you can't beat somebody with nobody." If they don't take Hoover they will have to select some other man well known to the people and popular. Gen. Dawes would be their man, but he is for Gov. Lowden. A desperate effort will be made to draft President Coolidge with or without his choosing.

And on Thursday, for 15 minutes, he contemplated a horned toad that sat in a glass bowl on his mahogany desk and blinked. That toad is supposed to have lived entombed in a Texas cornerstone for 31 years.

THERE is no truth in the yarn, of course, but Republicans wish that Coolidge would take more interest in their dilemma, and pay less attention to sea elephants and toads.

THE Pope condemns public gymnastic exhibitions by young girls, especially in Rome. "If a woman's hand must be raised, we hope and pray it may be raised only in prayer or in acts of charity," said the Pope. He thinks modern gymnastic exhibitions by women are worse than those in days of pagan Rome.

THEY are fortunately not quite as bold as in ancient Greece, when young men and women ran together in races, entirely naked, and, strange to say, thought nothing of it.

It must have been a strange race of men, for the old lawmaker found it necessary to order that girls' skirts be slit on the side from the hip down that the interest of young men might be aroused.

SOME think our present display of legs and knees leads toward the entirely undressed condition of primitive man. It doesn't.

The indecency which the Pope denounces often follows great wars. Then it dies out. The human race, alone in all the animal kingdom, is innately modest.

YOU will probably see quick, unpleasant action in China. Forty-six Japanese soldiers were massacred at Tsinan and other foreigners were killed. Japan sends warships and troops to China, and you will hear of more killings in that unfortunate country.

SCIENTISTS do not know how the monstrous dinosaurs were killed off. They vanished, suddenly from earth, no one knows just why. China, dinosaur among human units, may go the way of the dinosaurs.

The latter had gigantic bodies and heads so small they couldn't hold a brain big enough to direct the body.

"G'WAN, YOU'RE OUT!"

This picture is any place in Pittsburgh today, yesterday and the day before. It was taken at noon today (there's no school, remember) and Pittsburgh's children—well, some of them!—are barefooted. The swimmin' hole and commies are due perhaps next week, unless it snows.

"HEIGH-HO!"

This is last Saturday, a week ago today, in this little story of a week's misdemeanors by the weather man. Above is Anne Louis Cowan with, of course, snow.

"RICH MAN, POOR MAN—"

So chant the little girls at their jacks on this happy May day, little suspecting that perhaps tomorrow the wolf, howling about miners' doors, may be leaving his ominous tracks in the snow. This photo may be of your own children at home today. Look at it again.

"TURN BACK—"

"Turn back, turn back, oh, Time, in thy flight." And it doesn't have to turn back more than exactly a week to this nightmare, a scene taken early last Sunday morning. Send your complaints to the local weatherman.

ARREST 2 IN ASYLUM

WARREN, Pa., May 5.—Accused of twisting a towel around the neck of Elwin Roberts, Coudersport farmer, a patient in the Warren State Hospital, causing his death, Herbert Johnson, 32, attendant, is under arrest on a charge of murder. Clifford Delp, also an attendant, is held as a witness.

Roberts, a patient since May 1, died Thursday morning from rough treatment, it is alleged. A coroner's jury last night found that "death was caused by exhaustion, the result of unwise methods."

Sheriff Jefferson and Chief of Police George Haehn, who arrested the two attendants, reported that Roberts had been injured while the attendants attempted to drag him to bed when he became obstreperous. In addition to two abrasions on the neck, one four inches long and one two inches long, there also were bruises on the chest and a cut over one eye. Dr. V. M. Ball, who performed the autopsy, testified that both lungs were partly congested and that Roberts suffered from an abdominal hemorrhage.

At the inquest Delp testified that he held Roberts' hands while Johnson used a towel twice "without squeezing hard." He said Roberts had attacked another patient and the towel was used to get him back to his own bed.

Dr. W. K. Skinner, hospital physician, said Roberts had delusions, wanted to kill himself and thought his food was poisoned.

Both attendants will be arraigned before Justice Nelson late today.

FINDS KEY TO HOME, TAKES $175 DIAMOND

A key hung on a nail near a rear door which had been locked provided the means for a thief to enter the home of Miss Mary Mitchell of 810 Fifty-sixth street late last night. A diamond ring valued at $175 was taken. No trace was found of the robber.

BOY, 11, HURT AS CYCLE CRASHES WITH AUTO

When his bicycle crashed head-on with an automobile in Oakdale last night, Carl Longstreth, 11, son of Henry Longstreth, suffered concussion of the brain. The auto was driven by Earl M. Mitchell, Oakdale garage proprietor.

LAKE GULPS PLANE

LONG POINT, Ont., May 5.—(AP.)—Mystery today shrouded the identity of the occupant or occupants of a biplane which exploded yesterday and plunged into Lake Erie. The plane was of the United States mail type.

Falling into the water half a mile from the Long Point lighthouse, the air machine disappeared in view of the lighthouse keeper, the captain of a tug and several fishermen. Before boats could rush to the rescue the engine exploded, leaving only scattered bits of wreckage and a few articles of clothing. Search for the bodies of the pilot and of possible passengers failed.

A piece of wing painted gray, with a blue stripe bearing the number "20;" a map with the route from Boston to Chicago underlined, and a felt hat were among the clues found.

S. B. Cook, Long Point lighthouse keeper, said he had been watching the plane for several minutes as it sped along only 100 feet above the water. As it came opposite the lighthouse it suddenly sideslipped and plunged into the water. He said he heard the engine running for several minutes in the wreckage, then as the tug Ruth, commanded by Capt. J. Dirrel, neared the scene, an explosion tossed portions of the plane and water high in the air.

Cook said it was too far away to tell definitely, but he believed the plane carried only the pilot.

Fishing vessels that cruised over the scene of the wreck recovered the hat, a glove, a shoe, apparently never worn, a large gasoline tank, the piece of wing and the chart.

Holds Ditch Against Workmen

"HOLDS" DITCH SIX HOURS

Mrs. Helen Barr, 1527 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, entered a ditch in front of her home at 10 o'clock and stood in it until 4 in the afternoon. The story is just this: Among the improvements underway in East Pittsburgh is a pipe line draining a hill in Chalfant borough, nearby. A right-of-way was arranged by McCrady Brothers, contractors, with Mrs. Barr, whereby the ditch was to be dug through her property. But the ditch was started in another place, she says, and she resented it. Arguments of no avail, Mrs. Barr entered the "trench" and stood off the workmen in the blazing sun, effectively and picturesquely preventing further work. Friends brought her lunch and the contractors called for state police, who didn't come. So progress on the ditch was exactly nil.

Bucs Meet Braves At 3

The Pirates and Braves will hook-up in the third game of their four-game series at Forbes Field this afternoon, both seeking a win and thus assuring themselves of an even break in the four contests.

Yesterday the Buccos unleashed a powerful attack and pounded out a total of 21 safe hits from the offerings of a trio of Boston hurlers. The score of the game was 13-3, Burleigh Grimes holding the Boston hitters safely in check as his mates blasted away with their potent war clubs. The Waners, Traynor and Comorosky led the Corsairs' attack.

Manager Bush will use Joe Dawson on the mound today. The Braves expect to have Don Smith, one-time infielder, groomed for hurling today. Today's game will start at 3 instead of 3:30. The Braves will wind up their stay here Monday.

THE WEATHER

Showers this afternoon; fair tonight and Sunday; cooler tonight; lowest temperature tonight about 50 degrees.

PGH. M. E. BISHOP NOT TO BE TRIED

KANSAS CITY, May 5.—(AP.)—The first trial of a Methodist bishop before an ecclesiastical court was under way here today with the presiding bishop of the tribunal named in a complaint charging violation of church dogma and discipline.

Shortly after the personnel of the court selected to try Bishop Anton Bast, of Copenhagen, on charges of imprudent conduct unbecoming a minister, was confirmed at the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here yesterday, the complaint was filed against Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of Pittsburgh, who is presiding at the Danish prelate's trial.

NOT CASE FOR TRIAL

Dr. R. J. Wade, conference secretary, with whom Mr. Cooke entered the complaint, said the allegations were not a matter for trial, but "simply the complaint of a minister against his bishop which will be referred to the Episcopal committee." This committee deals with matters of discipline.

The complaint, entered by the Rev. George A. Cooke, of Wilmington, Del., took exception to the manner in which Bishop McConnell conducted an annual conference at Wilmington, March last, and to his alleged approval of the teachings of the theory of evolution. The Pittsburgh bishop was quoted on evolution in a pamphlet issued by the American Civil Liberties Union in January, 1927.

ASSAILS DOCTRINE

Mr. Cooke charged that Bishop McConnell's stand on evolution was "in repudiation of his vows as a minister and in violation of the laws of the church which uphold the Bible as the inspired word of divine truth."

In charging unlawful conduct of the Wilmington conference, Mr. Cooke claimed that Bishop McConnell had certified to the correctness of the conference, knowing that part of the proceedings had been suppressed. The complaint set forth that charges had been brought against two former ministers at Wilmington for alleged violation of church rules regarding remarrige after divorce, and that the two ministers were given pastorates in violation of church laws.

Mr. Cooke said that personal vindication entered into his action, inasmuch as he and Bishop McConnell had differed on doctrinal matters since they were students at the theological school at Boston University.

POWER TRUST SCHOOL WORK BACKED HERE

Philadelphia Company Is Responsible For Pitt Utilities Course.

Andrew W. Robertson, president of the Philadelphia Company, admitted today it was at the company's request the University of Pittsburgh established a course of instruction in public utilities administration in its evening school of economics.

Chancellor John G. Bowman declared thousands of students of the University of Pittsburgh spend several hours a week in offices of various public utilities corporations, including the Philadelphia Company, the Bell Telephone Company and other large interests. The object, he said, was to acquaint students with the various business systems in use in practical administrative and office routine work.

HELP GENERAL FUND

"The Duquesne Light Company," said Mr. Robertson, alluding to one of the Philadelphia Company's subsidiaries, "belongs to all of the associations of power companies, and has contributed its share to the fund which it has been testified before the Federal Trade Commission that they spent. Some of the money probably has been spent unwisely.

"An attempt is being made to represent as discreditable actions that were creditable. I will not admit that it is necessarily discreditable to try to have certain textbooks introduced in the public schools or to have others removed. As a hypothetical case, let us suppose that there was in use a textbook in which the author said, 'It is notorious that street car companies are poorly managed.' I think I would be justified in trying to have that book taken out of the schools, because the statement would be untrue.

"However, we have done nothing to influence the public school authorities here in regard to textbooks. We have promoted education, but it has been legitimate education. We have not circulated political propaganda under the guise of education.

Propaganda in Universities, Newspapers, Scientific Documents.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The money bags of the so-called power trust and the long arm of its influence were traced by Federal Trade Commission investigators yesterday into universities, schools, newspaper channels and "scientific' publications.

Hearings in the commission's investigation of finances, propaganda and lobby activities of the electric power interests disclosed:

1. That Samuel S. Wyer, consulting engineer of Columbus, O., and foe of the Boulder Dam enterprise, "agreed to accept" $3,000 and expenses for a "survey" of the famous publicly operated Ontario hydro-electric project, according to documents from the power interests' files. Four months after the date of these documents Wyer published, under Smithsonian Institution auspices, the notable attack which precipitated an international controversy, figured prominently in the Muscle Shoals fight of 1925, and has been cloaked in much mystery ever since. No documents have been presented, however, showing that Wyer actually accepted the money.

WORK ON FACULTIES

2. That power interests launched public utility courses in the University of Pennsylvania and Temple University by "laying the groundwork circumspectly and with care so that the actual suggestion that such courses be started came from the faculties," according to a letter written by J. S. S. Richardson, their former publicity director in Pennsylvania and now publicity director of the joint committee of National Utility Associations.

3. That these interests "exerted pressure" on schools, interviewed publishers and argued with authors in their task of eliminating matter they disapproved from textbooks on civics, economics and

THREE DIE AS WING FALLS OFF PLANE

DAYTON, O., May 5.—(AP.)—Three men were killed here last night when an airplane crashed on Johnson Field. Those killed are Harold Forshay, an army reserve pilot; Walter Clark, machine operator, and Blair Cross, a plumber, all of Dayton.

Forshay borrowed the airplane from Alfred Johnson, owner of Johnson Field, to take Clark and Cross for a ride. The plane was 1,500 feet in the air when a wing fell off. The three men were killed instantly.

public utilities administration course given by the University of Pittsburgh. The pupils were mostly our employes."

Mr. Robertson said he was not familiar with "Community Civic," a textbook written by Prof. R. O. Hughes, of Peabody High School, which, it was testified at the Federal Trade Commission's hearing, was found objectionable by public utilities companies.

TEACH IN OFFICES

"It is entirely true that public utilities corporations have established courses of study at their offices as a part of the regular curriculum in the downtown division or night classes of the University of Pittsburgh," declared Chancellor Bowman. "These students spend several hours a week in offices, not only in the Philadelphia Company, but in the Bell Telephone Company's plant and in the counting rooms of various other large corporations.

"The object is to give the students a practical knowledge of the systems of work in these various utilities and to prepare them for positions in offices of this sort. Several thousand of our students are enrolled in these classes.

"The students prepare themselves for jobs as clerks as well as positons open for junior executives in public utilities corporatons, steel companies, trust offices and banks—in fact, all large manufacturing and mercantile concerns. In addition to their academic knowledge they make a special study of various business systems."

TECH NOT INFLUENCED

"Our students in the engineering departments obtain jobs with the big power companies," said Dr. Thomas S. Baker, director of Carnegie Institute of Technology, "and in the natural course of events they study with a view of fitting themselves for those positions, but to my knowledge there has been no effort to influence their social or economic viewpoint of the case."

"We are using two of Mr. Hughes' textbooks—'Community Civics' and 'Textbook in Citizenship'"—declared J. F. Bower, principal of McKeesport High School. "I have never heard anything against Mr. Hughes' books and I understand they have been pretty widely used in schools throughout the country. Why I have been told Mr. Hughes has made as much as $100,000 out of his books.

"We may put in a new textbook next year, but it won't be because the public utilities do not like the present ones. No, we'll put in a new book if we can find one better," Mr. Bower concluded.

MONTANAN, WITHOUT VOTES, QUITS

WASHINGTON, May 5.—(AP.)—The impending Hoover-Watson battle for Indiana's delegates to the Republican convention was of secondary interest to Washington political observers today as a result of important developments forging to the front in Democratic ranks.

Withdrawal of Senator Walsh of Montana from the race for the Democratic presidential nomination, the decision of Senator Reed of Missouri to continue in the fight, and the significance of a half-hour political conversation between Senator Borah (Rep.) of Idaho and Mrs. Clem Shaver, wife of the chairman of the Democratic National Committee—all were subjects of lively discussion among those looking forward to the big conventions next month.

READY FOR COST QUIZ

Meanwhile, the new senatorial campaign expenditures investigating committee moved forward with its preparations for starting Monday the examination of the first group of 14 presidential candidates as to their pre-convention money outlays. The committee also was expected today to make public the acceptances to appear it already has received from nine of the candidates.

Senator Walsh, perhaps best known as the prosecutor of the Senate oil investigation, formally withdrew from the race yesterday with the declaration that the results of the California primary "quite clearly indicate that the Democrats desire Gov. Smith as their candidate."

Walsh ran third in that primary and up to the time of his withdrawal had captured no delegates to the Houston conclave.

REED IN TO FINISH

Reed, who ran second to Smith in the California scrap, was quick to follow Walsh's announcement with the statement that he would carry on his campaign to the finish.

Declaring he was glad Walsh took himself out of the picture because it "clarifies the situation and emphasizes the issue," the Missouri Senator said he only wished the Montanan had arrived at his decision "before he muddied the waters by entering the California primary."

Apparently directing another verbal dart at Walsh, Reed added:

"If I were a general in a war I would not surrender my army because I had lost a skirmish."

Norman Merz, a student at St. James parochial school, Stwickley, was declared the winner of the spelling bee conducted for students in the parochial grade schools after he had out-spelled 53 companions in an extra session last night in the Catholic high school, Fifth avenue.

Fifty-four students survived the final contest last night, but all except Mertz fell in the extra session.

Cecillia Gurski, of St. Mary's School, Kittanning, was the last to drop out and leave Mertz the winner. Sixty-five students began the finals last night and only 11 had dropped out when the officials decided to introduce the list of words on which contestants have failed in the national spelling contests during the last 40 years.

The Rev. Brother Phillip, principal of the high school, conducted the contest.

AMERICANS REPORTED SAFE IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, May 5.—(AP.)—All Americans in Tsinan are safe, says a dispatch dated noon yesterday and received here today from the consulate at Tsinan.

Foreign firms and missions represented at Tsinan attempted to establish communications with the city, where Chinese and Japanese clashed but failed.

The Japanese wireless station at Tsinan has been silent since yesterday afternoon. There was some anxiety here because up to the present this has been almost the sole source of news from there.

PEKIN, May 5.—Besieged in Tsinan by 40,000 Nationalist troops, a small force of 2,000 Japanese today were fighting in defense of the foreign quarter, where persons of various nationalities have been concentrated for their safety.

Maj. Gen. Teakura, Japanese commander, took every available man from the Tsingtao garrison and was leading a forced march of 2,000 troops along the line of the Shantung railway to relieve their beleaguered comrades.

There was no confirmation of the loss of any foreign lives other than Japanese, but the Japanese military wireless stated that the troops were protecting other nationals. From this it was assumed that the two American consuls, Edward F. Stanton and Ernest D. Price, and the remaining American residents, mostly missionaries, were inside the Japanese cordon. The American legation at Pekin has had no reports from the Tsinan consulate since May 1.

The troops from Tsingtao had a difficult march of some 200 miles before them, since the railway between Tsingtao and Tsinan had been systematically destroyed at a dozen places.

YOUTH'S PRANK LEADS TO SUIT

A fight, growing out of a boy's prank, resulted in a $50,000 damage suit being filed in Common Pleas Court. Joseph A. Heyl brought the action against R. L. Leasure, a sign board builder.

Heyl says Leasure was building a sign along Grandview avenue near Augusta street on April 18 when, because of some prank on the part of his son, Joseph A. Heyl, Jr., Leasure had seized the boy and threatened him. The next day the father went to see Leasure and said that the latter attacked him with his fists. Heyl says he has been permanently injured about the spine.

EVACUATED

The "home" of Martin Morgan in this jolly month of May was evacuated—by a corps of deputy sheriffs at the request of Albert Oxley, owner, who said he couldn't collect the rent. A whole afternoon, the boys sweated and heaved; when they finished Martin Morgan, "ragman," had all his effects in the street, piled 10 feet high, including the "commodities" of his vocation.

STREET BLOCKED

When the task was finished, the deputies left. Then traffic on the street came to a stop; it just couldn't get around Mr. Martin's household and business effects. Martin (right) and other "ragmen" (above) started to move the stuff elsewhere.

CITY "PITCHES IN"

After that, the bureau of highways and sewers had a call to 1426 Hamlin way and a crew of city "movers" had to go out to open up the street for traffic. Deputies in "moving" Martin used doors and windows as exits in cleaning out this "home" and business establishment. But it became a game and the deputies lost; the city's bureau had the "last move." It's not known who gets the next one.

BIG FLOOD MENACES VALLEY

GREENVILLE, S. C., May 5. — (INS.) — Consternation reigned throughout the fertile Saluda River Valley today as the giant 700-foot Greenville water works dam threatened to burst momentarily and release 6,000,000,000 gallons of water.

In event the gap in the drain pipe, which started last night, widens and the entire dam structure gives away, the thickly populated valley, extending from Table Rock Cove, 31 miles north of here, to Ware Shoals, 20 miles south, will become inundated, it was believed.

"Everything is holding now," reported H. W. Perry, superintendent of the city water works. "There will be no disaster until the dam gives way, and then there's no telling what will happen. It looks pretty bad."

Should the dam collapse, it was expected, property damage would run into the millions of dollars, as the valley is dotted with cotton mills and rich farmlands.

Although the towns in the area were mostly deserted, and the people moved to higher and safer ground, it was feared there still might be some loss of life in case the giant dam suddenly breaks today. For many persons in the outlying farming districts had not left their homes and a few remained in the towns.

ROBBER SUSPECT, SHOT, TAKEN TO WASHINGTON

Milton Bowling, 25, of Washington, D. C., shot after he was said to have participated in more than a dozen store holdups, was returned to Washington this morning by detectives from that place. Bowling was admitted to the Homeopathic Hospital April 17 last, suffering from two bullet wounds in the left leg. He said that he had been shot by a highwayman near Curry.

ABUTMENTS DETERIORATE

Cracks are appearing in the concrete facade at the north end of Liberty Tunnels. The back wall (above) has cracked in a number of places, the largest is shown on the right above the letters "E" and "L." Even the concrete abutments holding up the hillside at both sides of the Tubes are crumbling, one of which is shown above.

PGH. FLIER FIRST TO LAND AT ELLWOOD CITY FIELD

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., May 5.—Lieut. Frank Ambrose, of Rogers Field, Pittsburgh, landed the first airplane on the new flying field of the Ellwood City Aero Club yesterday. Ambrose and George Outlander came to inspect the field. The club's plane will be delivered in two weeks.

FIRE EXPLODES SHELL, WOMAN SHOT IN LEG

ROCHESTER, Pa., May 5.—Mrs. Carrie Bruell, 23, New Brighton, was shot in the left leg when a cartridge exploded in a bonfire in the yard at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. T. Buttermore, 520 East Washington street.

FIRE HITS FORESTS IN PA.

GREENSBURG, May 5.—(AP.)—Ten forest fires swept 232 acres of ground in the Westmoreland, Somerset and Fayette county district about here yesterday.

Most of the fires were in Fayette county, where 120 acres were burned over. In that county fires for a time threatened buildings in Donegal township and seemed likely to reach several buildings at Radebaugh, among them the old state police barracks.

Greensburg firemen, summoned by messenger because of crippling of telephone communication facilities in recent fires, were called several times during the day as the fires burned over 22 acres in Somerset county and 90 acres in Westmoreland county.

NAME BALLOON RACE OFFICER

Plans for the National elimination balloon races, to be held Memorial Day, May 30, at Bettis Field, went forward yesterday with the announcement that Lieut. Frank McKee, U. S. Army, commanding Norton Field, Columbus, O., will serve as operations officer.

Lieut. McKee will come to Pittsburgh Sunday to confer with local officials in charge of the race.

Former Congressman James M. Magee, with other members of the executive committee, and Walter Chambers, manager, will fly to Washington Monday to confer with members of the contest committee, National Aeronautic Association, under whose auspices the races are to be conducted.

2 Bandits Kidnap Cab Man Near Clark's Home

Two auto bandits operated in front of the home of Public Safety Director James M. Clark early today. T. H. Triuse, of 620½ Chautauqua street, was seized in his parked taxicab in front of the director's home at Penn and Linden avenues, driven to the Stanton avenue entrance of Highland Park, robbed of $11 and then thrown out of the machine.

Both bandits flourished revolvers and warned Triuse that if he were not "careful" he would be found dead along a country road as was another car driver recently.

RUM RUNNER SUSPECT CAPTURED AFTER CHASE

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 5.—After an exciting chase through the eastern part of Washington, Joseph Rabbish, 23, of Morgantown, W. Va., was arrested and his automobile and 110 gallons of liquor confiscated. He was alleged to be transporting the liquor from Pittsburgh to Morgantown. He was held under $2,000 bail for a hearing.

GORDON WOMAN SEIZED

Nettie Gordon, whose activities have caused her frequent arrest by North Side police, has again been taken into custody—this time by Federal prohibition agents — and today is out on $1,000 bail.

Her arrest occurred late last night a he Girard Hotel, 1301 Federal street. Her chauffeur, Mark Walten, 32, of 521 Arch street, and a reputed bartender of the hostelry, William Glassburner, 54, of 2337 Atmore street, also were arrested.

At the time of last night's raid the hotel was operating under a temporary padlock injunction, agents announced. The visit, the agents said, marked the third time the hotel had been raided within the last two months. Those arrested will be given hearings before a United States commissioner Monday, May 14. Agents are searching for Harry Gordon, a brother and reputed proprietor of the hostelry. Search revealed a half pint bottle of whisky, a glass of whisky back of a bar and a bottle of Gordon gin.

AUTOS, LIQUOR SEIZED

Two automobiles and their loads were seized late yesterday by dry agents. John E. Walls, 21, of 6052 Stanton avenue, was arrested at Lincoln and Frankstown avenues. Forty-five gallons of moonshine were found in his car, agents said.

Following a chase through Hill district streets, the driver of a machine carrying six 5-gallon cans of moonshine jumped from the car and fled at Webster avenue and Tannehill street.

Other places raided, seizures made and those arrested, agents say, follow:

60 WILD DUCKS FEED ALONG BEAVER RIVER

BEAVER, Pa., May 5.—A flock of 60 wild duck are feeding in the Beaver River just above its junction with the Ohio. They have been there for a week. The game warden is looking for a Bridgewater man who fired into the flock. No casualties were reported.

CARRIED GUN

They had been sweethearts and intended to wed, Miss Blanche George, 1830 Carson street, testified in Morals Court when George Fritz, 48, Harwood street, was held for court on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. Miss George said Fritz went to her home intoxicated and frightened her. She called police and the "artillery" was found on him, according to the testimony.

Guffey at Leaders' Parley

FRENCH LICK SPRINGS, Ind., May 5.—George E. Brennan, Illinois Democratic leader, and J. F. Guffey, Pittsburgh, members of the Democratic National Committee, are at French Lick Springs, ostensibly for a rest.

Their visit, they say, has nothing to do with politics or with the coming Houston convention.

Fall Into Barrel Of Acid Kills Workman

STAGE AND SCREEN

California Sun Puts Realism In Pagan Festival Sequence Of Warners' Film, 'Noah's Ark'

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright 1928, King Features Syndicate.)

LOS ANGELES, May 5.

THE California sun played an important part in Warner Brothers big spectacle, "Noah's Ark," the other day when 5,000 extras were called for a pagan festival. The scene was laid in prehistoric times, and the monstrous idol which the people worshipped was supposed to excite the populace to such a religious frenzy that many dropped unconscious. And that is where the broiling sun added a note of realism. Before the day's work was finished a couple of dozen extra people were carried off the set unconscious. The heat was intense, and the emergency hospital erected on the lot was kept busy caring for those who toppled over. The celebration was staged in a motion picture idea of what a town square looked like a few thousand years back. It is the largest set Hollywood remembers—with the possible exception of some used by D. W. Griffith in "Intolerance." At one end a huge spit turned where the carcass of a horse was being barbecued. They had intended to use a steer and to actually feed the extra army with the roasted meat. But for some reason this plan was changed and the folks received lunch boxes instead. However, when it came to "shoot" scenes showing the multitude eating, succulent beef joints were passed out. The extra people looked at the joints and looked at the body of the horse. And appetites weren't so good until Director Michael Cortiz sunk his own teeth into the meat with great relish and explained through his megaphone that the meat was fresh from a well-known restaurant. Incidentally, you have no idea of the task entailed in handling 5,000 extra people. Warners solved it by assigning each group of slaves, soldiers, beggars and what have you, to an assistant director who had charge of his people from the time they checked in until they lined up at the pay-window at the end of the day.

Janet Gaynor, fresh from completion of Murnau's picture, "The Four Devils," will visit New York this month for the first time since she was 12 years old. Janet will tour around through the Panama Canal and be in Gotham when the Fox sales convention is held. Which should certainly give the boys plenty of inspiration to go out and sign up a lot of contracts for Fox, for Janet and for Winnie Sheehan.

"Heart to Heart" is considered a good title after all. It was to be the name of Colleen's last photoplay. But that was changed to "Happiness Ahead." However, they have used the "Heart to Heart" name for the picture which Mary Astor, Lloyd Hughes and Louise Fazenda are making for First National. Picture people find time for a little fun even while working. For instance, the cast of "Heart to Heart" is planning to give Mary a surprise party to celebrate her birthday. Just which one I don't know. But Mary looks too youthful and happy to have experienced many. Married life agrees with her. And Hubby Kenneth Hawkes is gaining weight from home cooking.

Louis Wolheim's face is certainly his fortune, so far as films are concerned. Louis' twisted nose and twisted smile have secured him a role in "The Innocent," which is Vilma Banky's first picture as a regular star. Heretofore, you know, Vilma has been co-featuring with Ronald Colman. At present Wolheim is working in "The Racket," as the villainous Nick Scarsi, bold, bad gunman who crosses the path of Police Captain Tom Meighan. Can't you guess what happens to Wolheim in the last reel?

The cast of "The Whip" has been dispersed, but the picture is still in work. Ten horses and 10 extra men were sent off to Tia Juana race track, and will ride their heads off until there are some thrilling racing shots taken for the picture. Dorothy Mackaill is the star. She and Jack Mulhall will make two pictures during the season.

First National is to offer no fewer than 54 features for the year. Colleen Moore, Corinne Griffith and Dick Barthelmess will each be starred in four pictures.

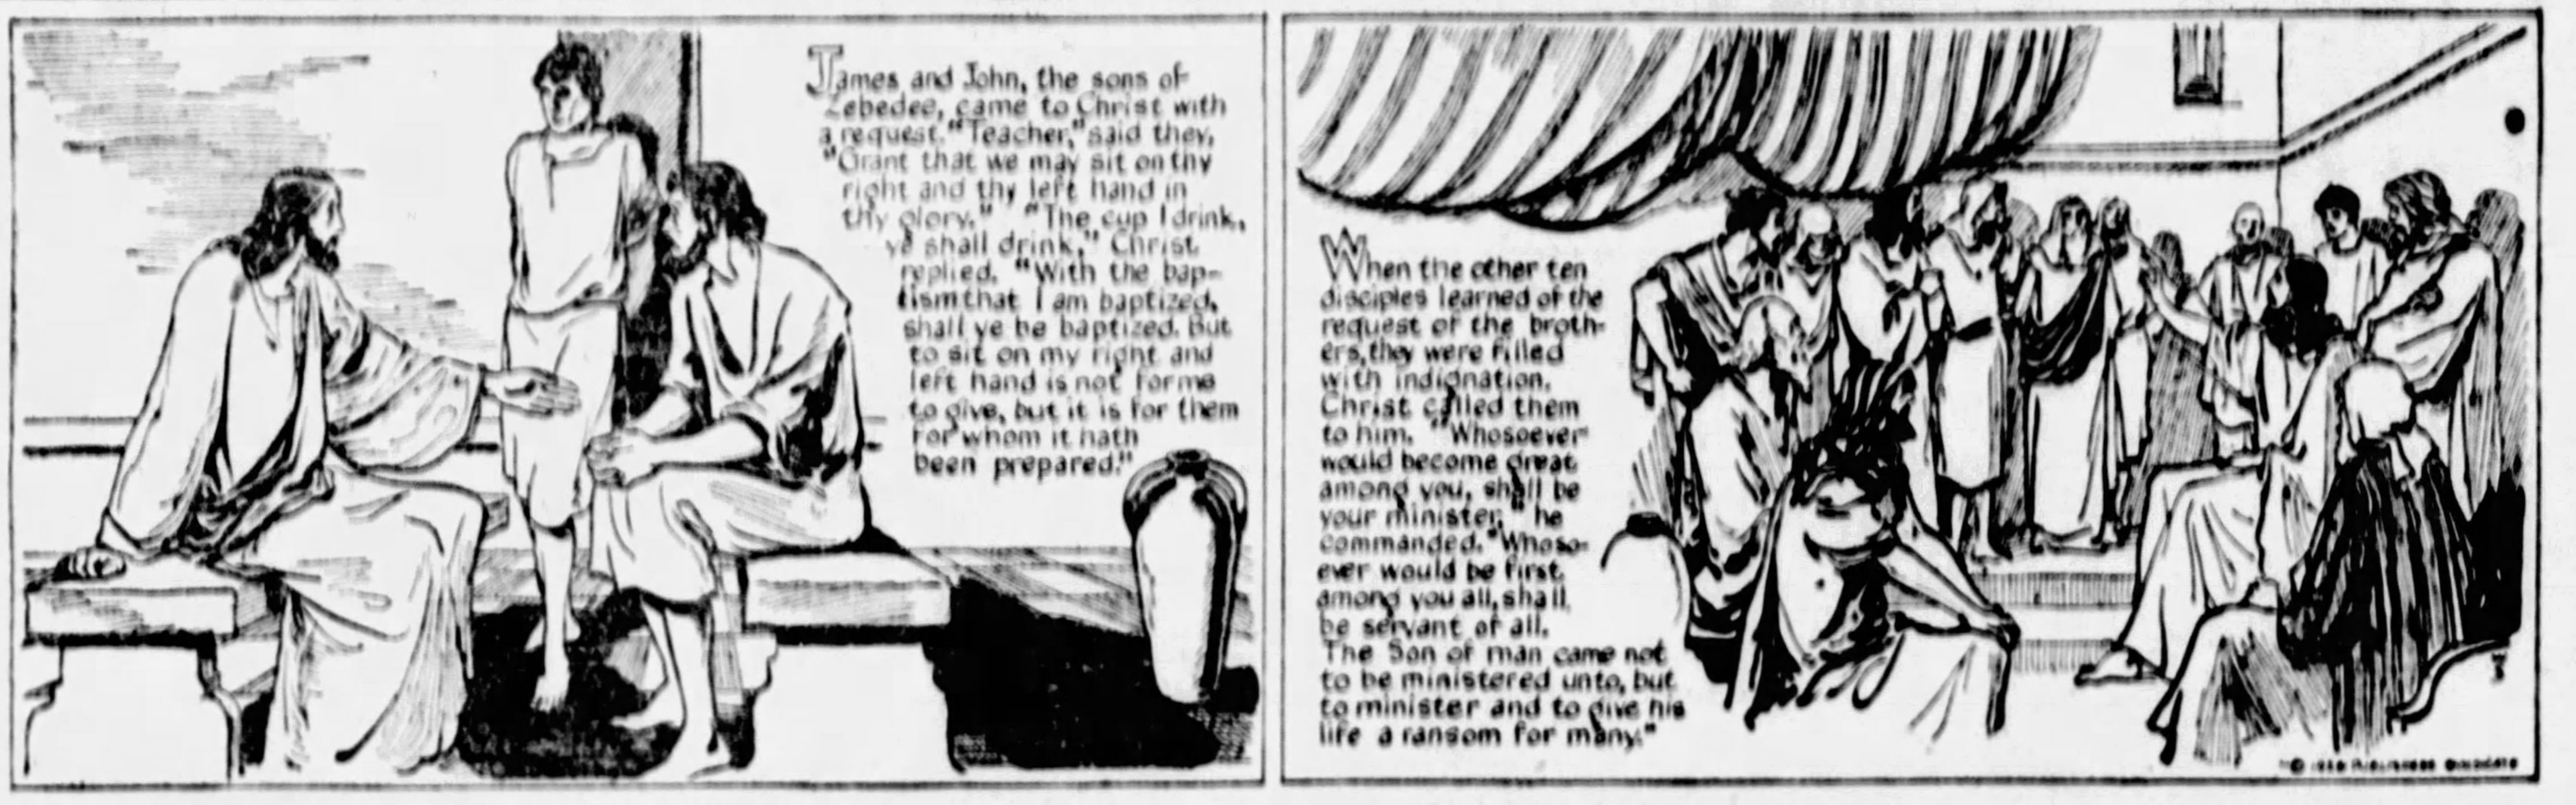
THE MEANING OF SERVICE

Sunday School Lesson
Mark 9:33-50; 10:35-45

By Harlowe R. Hoyt
Walter Scott



James and John, the sons of Zebedee, came to Christ with a request. "Teacher," said they, "Grant that we may sit on thy right and thy left hand in thy glory." "The cup I drink, ye shall drink," Christ replied. "With the baptism that I am baptized, shall ye be baptized. But to sit on my right and left hand is not for me to give, but it is for them for whom it hath been prepared."
When the other ten disciples learned of the request of the brothers, they were filled with indignation. Christ called them to him. "Whosoever would become great among you, shall be your minister," he commanded. "Whosoever would be first among you all, shall be servant of all. The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many."

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENTS ON SOCIAL EVENTS

Amateur Stage Holds Society Appeal

MARRIED IN WEST

MRS. RICHARD NORMAN WOOLNER

Mrs. Richard Norman Woolner was Miss Margaret Reid Zimmerman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Randall Zimmerman, Wilmerding, before her marriage April 20 in Los Angeles, Cal.

PERHAPS there is something just a bit insipid about the term "amateur theatricals," but there is nothing insipid in the zest which nearly all of us have for appearing on the non-professional stage, particularly when it is given the professional touch. To adopt a "ballyhoo" phrase, it appeals to old and young alike—and that is a quite literal statement. Grandmother and granddaughter may take part in the same amateur play, and do equally good work, too.

A glance at the casts listed for the Stage and Play Society's final production of the season, scheduled for Wednesday night in Carnegie Music Hall, provides proof for all this. You remember, don't you, how well Betty Scott took her part in the last performance of the society? And now her grandmother, Mrs. Henry B. Lupton, will have one of the principal roles in the first of the three plays to be given Wednesday. This is "Mon Ami Pierrot," written by Carroll Fitzhugh, president of the society. Mr. Fitzhugh is going to direct this play, too, and besides Mrs. Lupton, the cast includes Mrs. William Singer Moorhead, Esther Ely, Mrs. Thomas Jones Hilliard, Harold Geoghegan and Durbin Horne.

The second play will be "The Robbery," written by Clare Kumer, and directed by Mrs. Haines Allen Machesney. In the cast are Mr. and Mrs. C. F. C. Arensberg, Ann Watt and Joseph A. Kelly. There are just two characters in the third play, "The Silver Greyhound," written by Thomas Wood Stevens, and they will be taken by Madeleine McClintock and Chester Wallace.

You couldn't miss that huge painted sign "County Fair" which led you to the Edgeworth Club last night, could you? I am sure that everyone who followed that lead and attended the Sewickley Child Health Association's "fair," held, of course, for the benefit of its work among the children, will agree with me that it was a huge success.

There was an attractive "Fourth of July" atmosphere about the affair, reminiscent of the real fairs, with the long streamers of red, white and blue paper hung from the ceiling; the booths with their gay festoons of bright bunting, and the flags at the windows. Just inside the door were the first of the booths, where fruit and vegetables were on display, and the others were placed in the ballroom.

The younger matrons and maids of the valley have been working for weeks on the fair, under the direction of Mrs. Alleyne C. Howell. The invitations and posters were hand-painted, the invitations being done by Grace Clarke and sent out by Mrs. Alfred H. Harlow's committee. The posters were painted by Grace Clarke, Dorothy Scaife and Mrs. Stanley Lyon. And in addition to her work on the posters, Mrs. Lyon had a booth of her own at the party, where she cut out silhouettes, impromptu. Mrs. Ledlie Watt Young was in charge of the shooting gallery, not so far away.

In one corner of the ballroom, the guests were invited to stop and pose for tin-types, the photographer being Frank G. Darlington, Jr. Mr. Darlington donated the machine recently for use in this and in future benefits. May I add that some of the poses and the resulting tin-types were not in a particularly serious vein?

Mrs. William S. Charnley was a popcorn and peanut vender, assisted by Mrs. Twin Brooks, and the postoffice was presided over by Marjorie Harbison, Barbara Book and Grace Clarke. J. B. Cullum, Jr., acted as auctioneer at a booth of general household articles gathered from Sewickley merchants by Mrs. Cullum, Mrs. Paul L. Griffiths and Mrs. William Jackson Griffith, Jr. Mrs. John B. Semple, Jr., and Katherine Walker sold flowers.

There were bridge and mah jong for those who wanted to play, and all evening there was a lively sale of candy, cigarets, hot and cold drinks, sandwiches, ice cream cones and other edibles. The climax, perhaps, was the vaudeville show at 10 o'clock. It was managed by Lillian Rose and Mrs. Henry Clay Bughman, Jr., and included a tap dance by Eleanor McCargo and a dancing country chorus including Eleanor McCargo, Lillian Rose, Mrs. Frederick Gwinner, Katherine Porter, Martha Brooks, Marjory Kimball, Mrs. Ira Fitzh Brainard and Mrs. William Harry Brown, Jr., a combination, you will notice, of both Sewickley and Pittsburgh girls.

Chester Shepard conducted an amateur orchestra made up of Sewickley and Pittsburgh men, and Alexander Hayes sang "blackface" songs.

Mrs. Guy David Engle, of Wilkinsburg, entertained with a bridge luncheon of 25 tables yesterday in the Penn Lincoln Hotel, Wilkinsburg. A short musicale preceded the luncheon, given by Mrs. Elmina Hindley Sandell, who sang several ballads in costume, accompanied by Mrs. Mabel Sharrow, and Mrs. Elma B. Sulzner, contralto, who gave several numbers.

Mrs. Elias Sunstein is general vice chairman of the committee arranging the children's matinee showing of a screen production of "Alice in Wonderland," to be given next Saturday afternoon in Syria Mosque, for the benefit of the Community School. Henzie and E. Martin Browne, who are connected with the Tech drama department, will give readings from children's literature. Mrs. Clement H. Gile is chairman of arrangements and Mrs. Walter C. Leonard is in charge of publicity. Mrs. Charles Watkins is chairman of patronesses and Mrs. William K. Frank, program.

ENGINEERS' AUXILIARY GUESTS AT MUSICALE

Members of the local Woman's Auxiliary to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers were guests of Mrs. Tom Mercer Girdler at a delightfully planned musicale tea in the Longvue Country Club yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Girdler and Mrs. Frederick Crabtree, president of the auxiliary, received the guests together, and the program was presented by Miss Margaret Leyda, contralto; Miss Mary Redmond, violin; Miss Mary Jane Paul, reader; Miss Hulda Lefridge, accompanist, and Ralph Federer, piano. Sartorially, as well as artistically, the program was a delight, for the girls appeared in lovely costumes depicting "three centuries of fashion and song," opening their program with Easthope Martin's "Come to the Fair" as an ensemble. Miss Redmond's first solo, "Tambourin," completed the eighteenth century portion. Miss Leyda and Miss Paul contributed the second part, Mr. Federer's virile piano solos interspersing. The twentieth century part of the program is at once the longest, most interesting and most picturesque, although Miss Paul's readings were both of the same nature and somewhat inconsequential, albeit humorous. One of the most attractive was Miss Redmond's Chinese girl number, for which she played "Tambourin Chinois" by Kreisler. She appeared also as a German and American girl, playing appropriate numbers, and Miss Leyda was a Spanish and an Italian girl.

Elmer Kenyon, president of the Pittsburgh Drama League, has been made chairman of the committee of Pennsylvania judges for the three national contests in playwriting which the Drama League of America is preparing to conduct. Judges will be appointed from all the states to pass upon the manuscripts of a full-lenghth play, a Biblical play and a one-act play. The final jury of award will consist of Hatcher Hughes and Kenyon Nicholson, for the league; S. Marion Tucker, for the co-operating publishing firm, and Eva La Gallienne, for the producers. The purpose of the contests is to discover new authors who can write clean plays from the American standpoint. The winning plays will all be published and produced.

The Colfax Parent-Teacher Association will elect officers at its meeting on Tuesday evening. During the program hour which will follow the business session Mrs. D. K. Ballard will read and Mrs. George Schroeder, Jr., soprano, will sing, with Mrs. Emerson G. Hess as accompanist.

Annual reports will be heard and officers elected by the Keystone Association for Historical Research at a luncheon meeting in the Congress of Clubs on Monday. Mrs. Annie O. Wilson is taking reservations for the luncheon.

A thrift and health program will be presented Monday afternoon at the meeting of the Liberty School Parent-Teacher Association. Children of the second and sixth grades will give the program, which will consist of two playlets. A flag is to be presented to the kindergarten from the association and Miss M. Pollock, of the Pittsburgh Child Health Council, will speak on "Food Values."

"Newspaper Slants" is the subject of a talk to be given by Miss Gertrude Gordon on Tuesday evening before the Duquesne Civic Club in the Duquesne High School auditorium.

Hays Earns Pay, Rogers Finds, as Envoy

WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 5. —Say, those that thought Will Hays was over in Europe just to get away from the Republicans are mistaken. No wonder Bill draws such a big salary from the movies, he earns it.

Did you see what he did yesterday in France? France was about to bar our movies and Bill made 'em sign a contract where they not only retain our movies but, for every seven of ours the French see, they will have to look at one made in France.

That satisfied the French producers. All they wanted was to make theirs compulsory.

Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

P. S.—Say, I run out of paint. Some towns were painting their own homes with it.

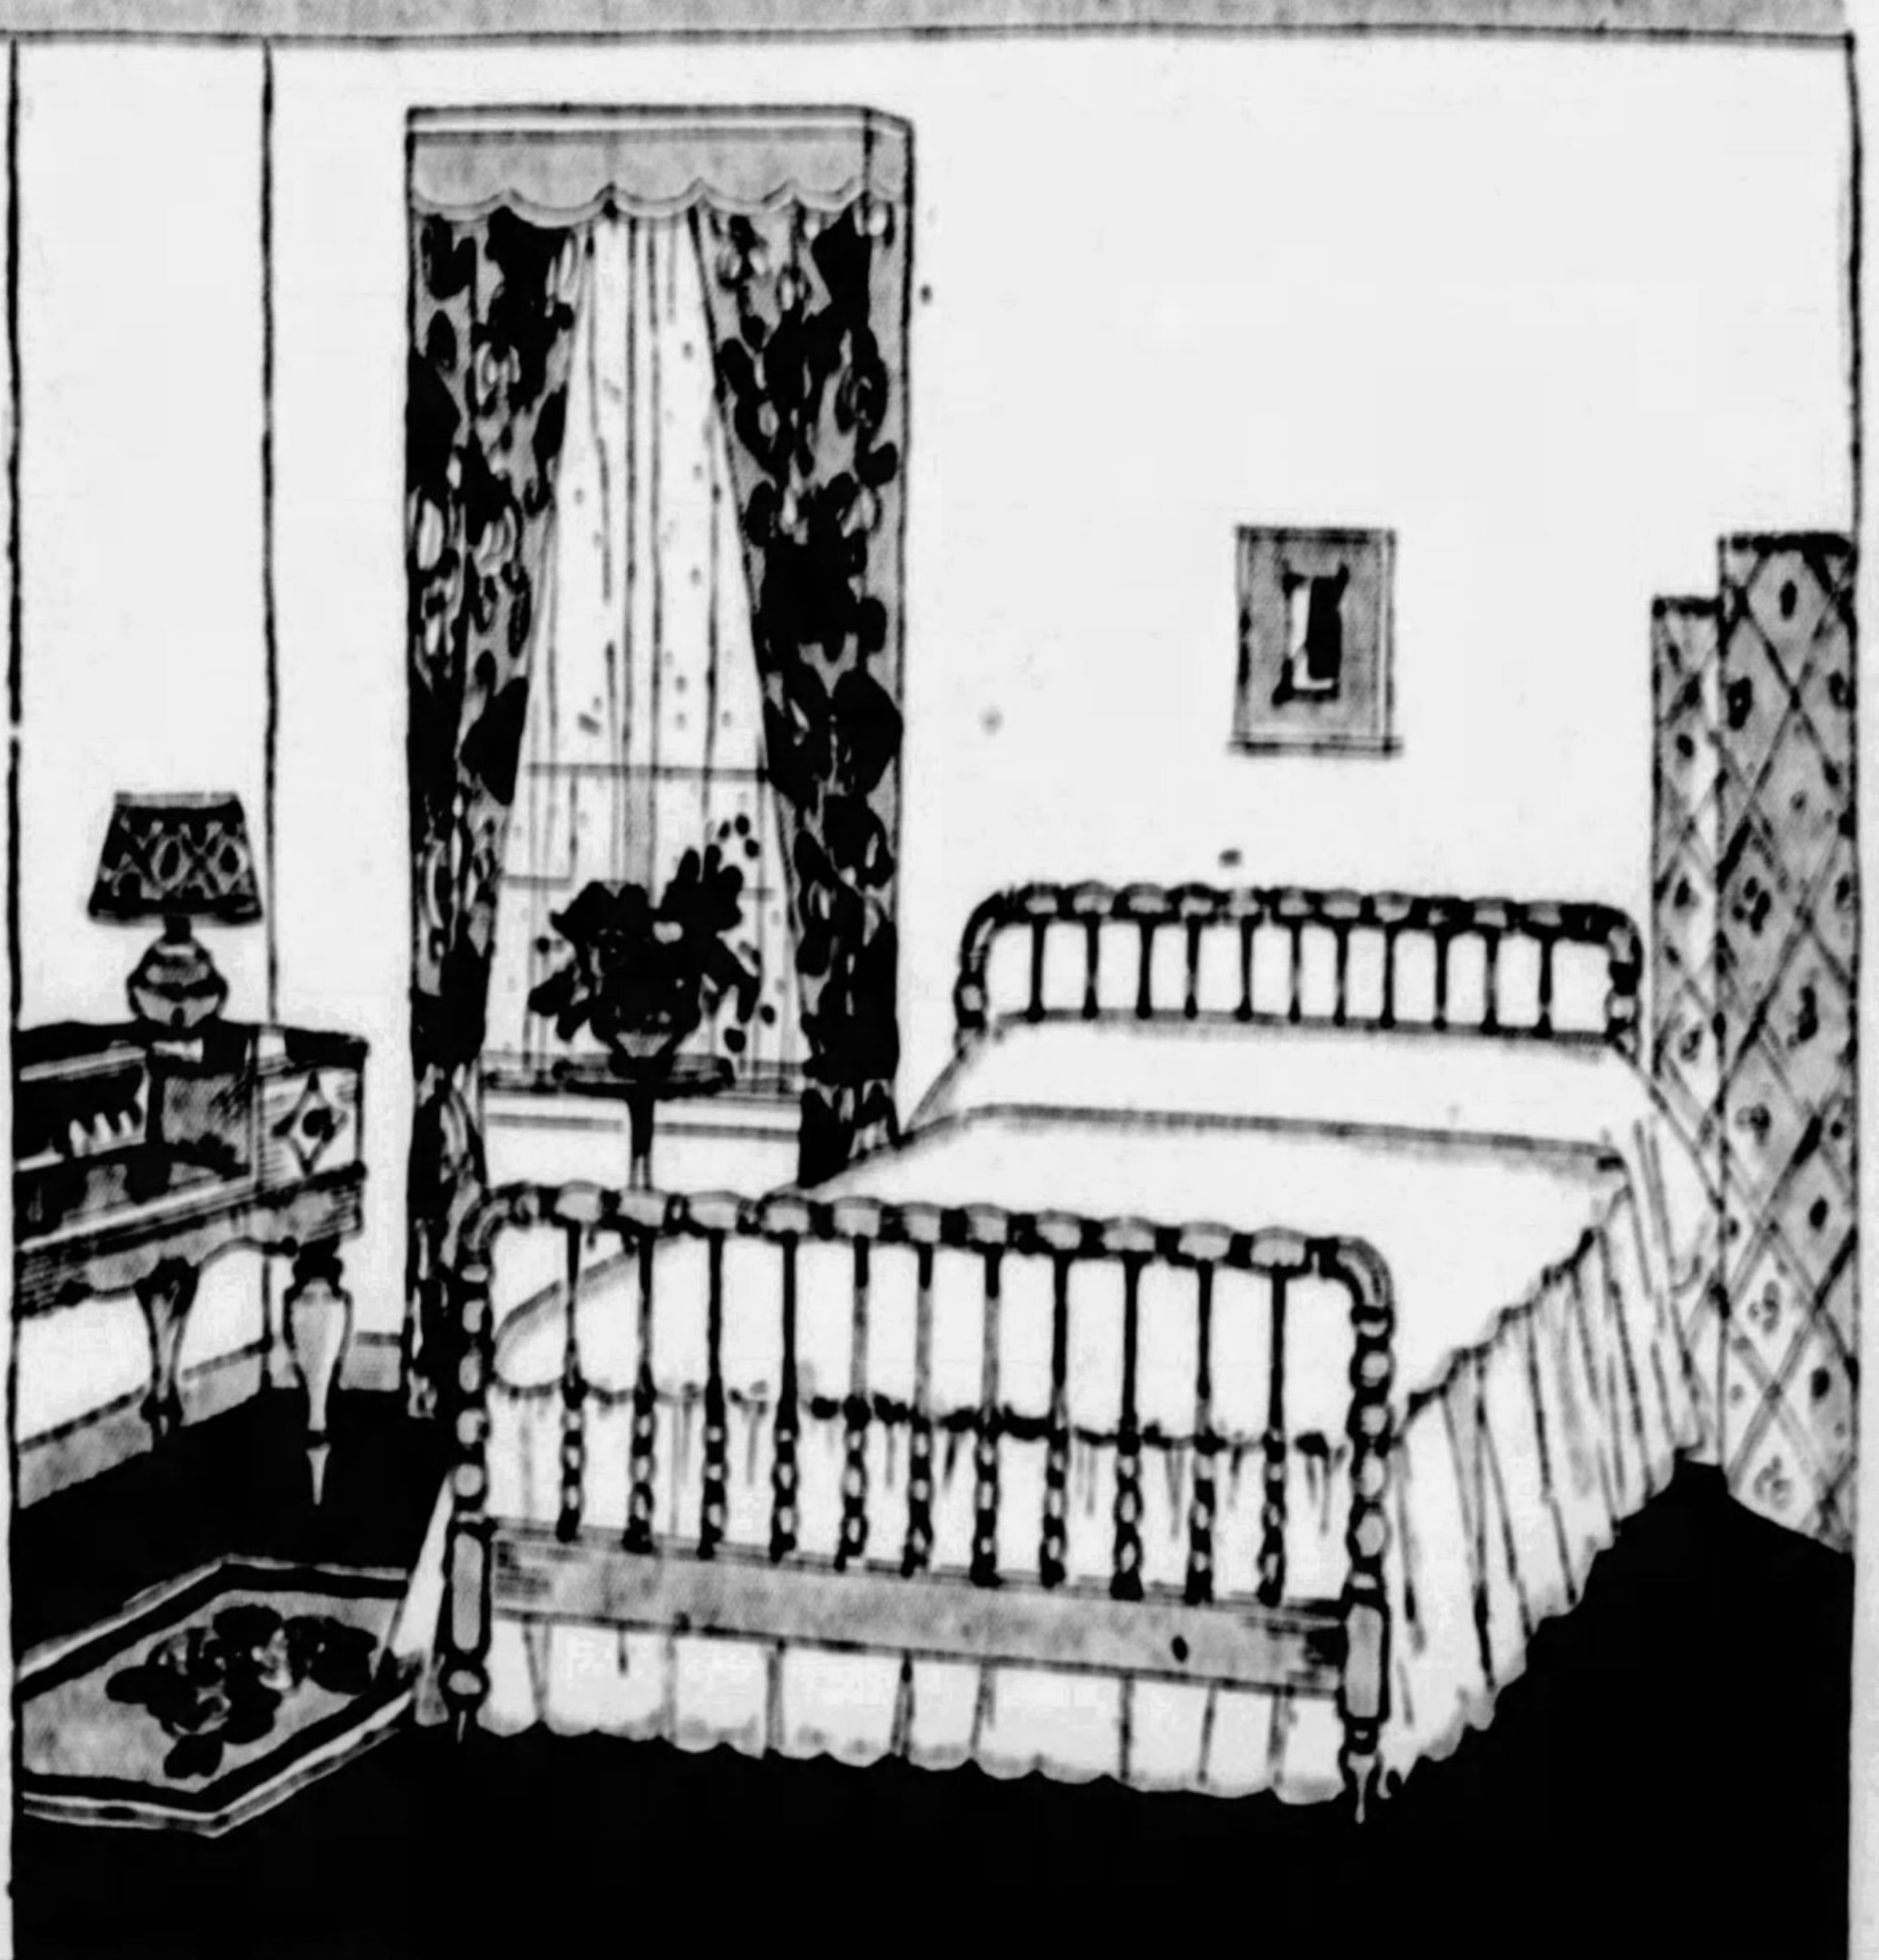
Early American Styles in Furniture

Next week is dedicated to spring decorating problems! Special price inducements, offerings of unusual value, and countless helpful suggestions have been prepared to aid some of the hundreds of families who are settling into new homes this spring.

For the many who prefer an early American scheme of furnishing, there is a wonderful collection of pieces here, in mahogany and maple. Those who collect reproductions, will enjoy an added thrill in "discovering" pieces at the special low prices next week.



An Outstanding Value in Early American Beds

Special $28.00

A special offering of early American style beds, including three styles in quaint spool beds, and a pretty poster bed. It is in the small details of finish that the good quality of these beds is apparent, despite the low price. They are all mahogany and gumwood. And there are both twin and full sizes.

Spinet Desks Special $45.00

All floor samples, including a number of styles, have been marked at this one low price. This includes our finest desks, measuring up to 56 inches wide.

Gateleg Tables Special $18.00

Just twenty of these tables, all of mahogany and gumwood, in 34x42 inch and 34x48 inch sizes (when open). The gateleg table is most versatile and useful.

Love Runs Sunrise To Sunset

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE dawn of youthful romance is as delicately lovely as a sunrise. Its hopes and dreams paint castles in the air. But when love culminates in marriage the air castles melt into "the light of common day."

Marriage often turns out to be prosaic. Jill finds that there are long, monotonous stretches of hard work, with difficulties of adjustment, between occasional thrills. She and Jack are opinionated. Each is unwilling to give in.

Jill, let us say, insists that country life is best for the children. Jack loathes commuting. Jill declares with spirit that if their country home is sold it will be over her dead body.

Jack departs on a business trip.

"Unless you come to your senses and decide to move to the city, I shall not come back," is his ultimatum.

Jack does not return to Jill.

Is there another woman? Jill wonders, suspects, fears.

* * *

JACK arranges with his lawyer to send a certain amount to support the children. He asks his freedom. This Jill refuses.

"I shall not let him escape from his responsibilities," she storms. "I hate him!"

Jack complains of his wife's stubbornness, her extravagance. But his complaints grow less bitter as time passes. He remembers the children generously at Christmas and birthdays. He meets them now and then in the city for a matinee.

"Betty needs dental work," Jack wrote his wife on one occasion. "Please have it attended to and send me the bill."

So Jill took 10-year-old Betty to the city to the family dentist. There Jack and Jill met for the first time in four years.

Jill had grown prettier, with gentler, more sympathetic charm. She had learned to demand less, to appreciate affection, overlook faults.

* * *

It was a real home, that wide-porched house with the roses climbing over it and the laughter of children ringing through it. And Jill was a woman a man could trust and look up to, even though she might be a bit hasty.

How pretty she looked this morning, Jack reflected, in her blue suit and hat which deepened the blue of her Irish eyes, with their dark lashes.

"Shall we have lunch together?" he suggested. "I wanted to ask you about a camp for Junior this summer."

So they lunched together—Jack and Jill and little Betty. And, as the result, Daddy came home. That family is reunited.

After years of stress and storm, Jack and Jill find that it is quite possible for them to live together as non-combatants. Expecting less, giving more, they experience the peace and happiness, the unfoldment of life, that result from married affection and comradeship, home and children.

* * *

DOUBTLESS there are few couples who have not at some time felt the impulse to seek divorce. After the idyl of the honeymoon, faults begin to show up with exaggerated ugliness by contrast. But those who enter into marriage in earnest are not quitters. Through patience they learn that married happiness is very much a matter of mutual consent, of making up one's mind to get along.

"Frank and I are not saints," laughed Vilma. "I like being spoiled and I like pretty clothes and good times.

"Frank has decided ideas, and somesimes they clashed with mine. Yet we keep happy."

"What is your secret of getting on together?" I asked. "Tell me so I can pass it on."

"We try to play fair," she replied. "And we are always ready to compromise. We were poor at first and for two years, before the baby arrived, I worked.

"'As long as you work downtown,' Frank would insist, 'it's only fair that I should do my share of the housework.' And he did—even to cooking and mending. We combined our efforts and made a jolly game of housekeeping.

* * *

"WHEN it comes to amusements, we make suggestions, but do not insist. I may suggest the theater. If Frank takes up the idea, very well. If he meets it with silence or half-hearted assent, I drop the matter. Frank uses the same tactics. Usually we find something we both want to do, some place we both want to go.

"If there are subjects on which we cannot agree, we talk about other things."

"Don't think we reached all this wisdom offhand the moment we were married," interrupted her husband.

Both laughed.

"No, indeed," echoed Vilma. "We blundered along for a while with plenty of thunderstorms, but nowadays it's always fair weather."

* * *

THE efforts of a man and woman to make their marriage a success, their patient adjustment, self-control and unselfish service keep them busy, progressive and happy in the best sense of the word.

Do not be depressed or discouraged by the inevitable problems of marriage. Do your part. If you look forward with happy, brave expectation you and he will love most of all the long serene sunset years together.

HOW ROSES TURNED RED -:- -:-

Drawn by
Nell Brinkley

"CUPID kissed Psyche." "Adam kissed Eve." "John Alden spoke for himself." "And modern George kisses Gloriette." And that's how roses once turned red and still keep on doing it. So the stories go.

But this is the true one, I think, the ancestor of all the songs and stories of how Roses Came Red.

Just this: Once upon a time—well, ONCE upon a time is right, indeed, for it was a long time ago, before dinosaurs and the big trees, but not before Love, for he was there at the very beginning. It was in the first garden, the first wonderful garden, where maned lions walked gently alongside wooly lambs. There was nothing but flowers and sun and happiness and neighborly animals there. And all the roses were white, as white as lilies. There were no tiger-lilies then, either, until later. One day two white roses leaned toward each other in the wind, and KISSED. And the next morning Love, meandering along that way, was electrified to find the two white roses—RED!

You might call that the first blush, too, George and Gloriette.

Fix Hair Now for Summer

By MARIA JERITZA

IN the Spring a woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of a permanent wave.

Equipped with her permanent, no longer does she fear to wet her hair when she takes her daily dip. The dampness of the seashore with its devastating effect on straight tresses no longer terrorizes her. Truly, the permanent wave has solved the problem of summer serenity for many a woman.

Possibly you have had your hair waved ere this. If not you will, if you are wise, economize in some other way and indulge in a "permanent," unless, of course, you are blessed with a natural wave. So many women get the same idea about this season that you will do well to make your appointment long ahead of time.

* * *

NEARLY all hair that is not bleached or dyed can take a permanent wave successfully, unless it is extremely fine. One expert assured me that he can wave even bleached and dyed hair provided he himself applied the bleach or dye, hence understood just what chemicals went into its composition.

A permanent wave is literally permanent, and has to be renewed only when a new growth of hair comes in straight and the old hairs fall out, as they must in course of time.

* * *

EACH human hair contains an inner tube. This tube is made up of tiny sections. The more flat these sections are and the more flexibly they are joined together, the more curly the hair. A permanent wave boils or rather steams straight hair until it loses its stiffness and becomes flexible or curly.

Whether your hair is kinky and brittle or beautifully wavy after a permanent depends on the skill of the operator in turning on the heat just the right length of time and in the right degree. When the hair cools after the heat is turned off it is shampooed and dried and lo! you have all the effect of naturally curly hair. It will require a finger-wave from time to time, however, or else a water wave, to "set" it in becoming and fashionable lines.

Damp weather agrees with curly hair whether the curl be natural or the result of a permanent, hence a well-groomed head with a permanent wave is at its loveliest during the showers, storms and dampness of spring and summer.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE ABSENT CURE

MY DAUGHTER, if thou wouldst hold a man to thee forever, I charge thee SEPARATE thyself from him, occasionally.

* * *

For, verily, a wife's presence is a sedative or an irritant; but her absence is a stimulant which stirreth his curiosity and piqueth his imagination.

* * *

Go to. A man observeth not the living room rugs until they have been taken up, nor noteth the dining room curtains until they have been taken down. Then doth he MISS them mightily!

HELEN ROWLAND

* * *

Likewise, his wife and his stenographer are as the hall console and the office clock, only parts of the ensemble, until one of them departeth for her summer VACATION. Then, doth he find himself helpless, even as one that hath lost his best molar.

* * *

So long as his wife is always in her place at the dinner table and his stenographer always at her desk in the morning, a man taketh their devotion for granted. Only when the vacant chair faceth him, doth he realize their importance to his well-being.

* * *

Yea, verily, so long as his wife greeteth him at the door at six p. m., a man observeth not her moods whether they be sad or smiling, nor her garments whether they be becoming or dowdy.

* * *

But let her be late or absent when he returneth, and his eyes do not miss the flush upon her cheek nor the chicness of her new hat. And lo, he LOOKETH at her, for the first time, with the light of curiosity in his glance.

* * *

And how better can a wife stir the motor of his curiosity and ignite his interest, than by removing herself from his horizon and causing him to WONDER.

* * *

For, alas, a good wife is like unto a good tooth, whereof a man taketh no thought, until he feareth that he may lose it. And no man realizeth the value of either, until the ache and the emptiness left by their departure causeth him to pity himself.

* * *

Then, be of good cheer, my daughter. For now approacheth the good old summertime, when a little matrimonial vacation causeth a husband's eye to grow keener, his step to grow livelier, and his kiss to wax warmer!

* * *

And wherefore shall a man wait until he readeth it on her tombstone, to learn how much he should MISS his wife?

Horoscopes

Sunday, May 6

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds auguries for important and possibly radical changes of a sudden and unforseen nature. While there may be definite benefits because of environmental changes or travel, yet the financial aspect is not encouraging and care must be exercised against loss.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an important year, with sudden change and possible travel, but their finances are hazardous. However, there are other attendant benefits and satisfactions.

A child born on this day may be ingenious and skillful in unusual directions or in scientific research, but its financial success may be jeopardized by rashness or speculative tendencies.

The Principle of Life is Universal, thine own life, the lives of all creatures are fragments of the ONE LIFE, undying, eternal.—THE THREE TRUTHS.

Monday, May 7

Monday's astrological figures hold portents of obstruction, delays and disappointment, which it will take much stamina and persistent effort to surmount. This may not be accomplished by indulgence in a tendency to bitterness and sarcasm with which the mind will be found tinctured. Personal matters may likewise need harmonious adjustment.

Those whose birthday it is should fortify themselves for a year of difficult situations, with obstacles and opposition which may be surmounted by resolution and application and not by bitterness and sarcastic indulgence.

A child born on this day may require firm training in order to equip it for life's battles, the main quality to be inculcated being an optimistic outlook and the love of labor.

There are a thousand hacking at the branches of evil to one who is striking at the root.—THOREAU.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland, M.D.
U.S. Senator From New York

Variety and Sleep Will Overcome Ragged Nerves

ONCE in a great while you meet a person who claims he was never tired in his life. Such individuals are rare indeed. Most of us get tired too often and too much. Modern life is so filled with temptations to overdo that fatigue is becoming more and more a factor in the production of disease.

DR. COPELAND

By fatigue, I mean weariness of the whole body—a general exhaustion from the over use of mind or muscles. It is probable that nature intended each of us to perform each day such an amount of work as would bring us at evening tired enough to seek refreshing slumber. That is one thing, but to be utterly exhausted each day is another.

It may be said that fatigue is the foundation for almost every ill to which flesh is heir. The first serious effect of fatigue is noticed in the nervous system. It may be evidenced in sleeplessness. When you are honestly tired you sleep well. But when you are overtired, or fatigued, the nervous system does not respond normally, and sleeplessness may result.

When the causes of fatigue are permitted to continue, there may be a neuralgia of some sort. It may take the form of sciatica or lumbago, headache, eyeache, or neuritis. It will be noted that we have now to deal, not only with fatigue from the original cause, but by reason of the resulting pain and sleeplessness, with a still further exhaustion of the system.

When once the nervous system is deranged it is only a step to some more serious disturbance. It may well be then, that fatigue is responsible, not only for physical but mental ills as well. Fatigue lowers the resistance of the body, too, so that it becomes easier for the ever watchful disease germs to attack us.

Everyone should have an occupation that will afford him an outlet for his energies. Good honest work, physical or mental, is necessary for the well-being of every one. But you should not carry this work beyond the point which experience shows is enough. This point can be recognized by any one who gives thought to his health.

There is always the temptation to overdo for one engaged in work which holds the interest. To keep at it too long, will bring in a reaction and this is bound to be detrimental. Any sort of work, physical or mental, which is carried to a point where the nerve force is exhausted and the heart is caused to flag, is bound to result in dangerous fatigue. This is work carried beyond the safety point into the danger zone. Calamity awaits him who persists in this practice.

Aside from avoiding overwork, a person who wishes to escape fatigue should guard against "getting in a rut." His recreation should be as dissimilar from his workday routine as his tastes will permit. It is easy to get into the mental state of the motorman who spent his vacation riding on the street cars. Perhaps this motorman got the necessary change and relaxation in having other motormen start and stop the cars at his command for a couple of weeks, but it is safe to say that he would have benefitted far more from a fishing trip or a few ball games.

Moderation in eating, regularity in bathing and cultivation of tranquility of mind, all have their value in protecting you. But probably the greatest of all safeguards is sleep. The tendency of modern man is to undersleep. There are famous men who have done great work and who have lived long on four or five hours' sleep at night. But they are exceptions. Eight hours' sleep is a necessity for most persons and nine hours of peaceful slumber is better for the great majority of workers.

Answers to Health Queries

A. I. R. Q.—What do you advise for oily hair?

2—What causes hangnails?

By ELEANOR GALE

Octogenarian

DEAR MISS GALE:

Happening to notice in your column recently "A Discarded Wife's Advice," relative to contemplated marriages where the woman is the senior party to the contract, the advice tendered is along biological lines, and generally sound grounds for careful consideration. But biological objections are based solely on animal instincts, which are far from being "true love and affection," as between members of the human species. There are no valid impediments to prevent to woman truly loving a man who is three years her junior, and vice versa. And when such conditions do obtain, the discrepancy in their ages cuts no larger figure at the close of a woman's wedded life than in the beginning. But no boy should think of marrying before he is 23 or 24, and a lady of 25 or 26 has only reached the peak of her womanly attractions. And the advice "to wait" in this case is correct. In the writer's own experience, his life companion was 2¼ years his senior—married at the ages of 26¼ and 29 years—to be followed by 50 years of connubial felicity. And in the case of one of his boyhood "chums," the wife is two years the senior, both yet living happy domestic lives, now beyond their golden wedding anniversary. One other couple he knew, where the wife was seven or eight years older, who lived happily far beyond middle age, with all the apparent affection of youthful lovers. It all depends on the quality of the affections which the lovers entertain for each other, the genuineness of which quality emanates from the character of the lovers themselves. If delinquent in character, no true, wholesome affections will ever exist, to be vitiated or lost. In the conditions referred to by "One Such Discarded Wife," her strictures are pertinent, and the test is to "wait." But if the character of the motive of the individual, whether of either sex, contemplating entering the bonds of matrimony, is to engage in the frivolous and transient pleasures of life only, again the answer is wait, and wait indefinitely.

OCTOGENARIAN.

Advice such as this, based on real experience, is truly worth the following. Thank you for writing.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters sent to this department must be written on one side of the paper only, and that no personal replies are ever given.

Only His

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have a question to put before you that means a whole lot to me. I have been very much interested in a certain young man and he has taken me home from church several times, and we have gone to the show together. He is a nice young man I think. Now, my question: My sister saw him speaking to a couple of girls that haven't much backing their characters and therefore she raves every time she sees me with him. I like the young man and just can't seem to give him up, for I know what his morals are. What shall I do? ONLY HIS.

It would be rather ridiculous to give up this young man simply because he happens to know two girls whose characters are questionable. He may have known them in school, you know.

Motherless

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am coming to you for advice, which I need very badly. Lately I met a fellow, who seems to care a lot for me. He says he loves me and asks me whether I love him. I say "yes," but deep in my heart I'm not sure of it, and yet during the day I can't help thinking of him. There is another fellow I knew for a long time, and he has never gone out with me, but every time I think of him I cry. Please do help me, for I am MOTHERLESS.

You are not in love with anyone yet, my dear. Don't let this man inveigle you into an engagement until you are sure of yourself.

Contented

DEAR MISS GALE:

Must a girl neck, smoke, etc. to get her man? I've just about come to the conclusion that it's so. You say there are some decent fellows. But where are they—where? Do men not want a wife who can sit down and read, quiet and contented, who will mend his shirts, bring him his bedroom slippers, let him read, let him sleep, keeps the house in order, can cook him a good meal, doesn't find fault with everything he says, and is always sweet and contented? What more does a man want? They say they want a quiet girl. If so, why do they pick on a girl who pets, smokes, etc.? Think of her bringing up children. Why do they like a girl who's nervy, loud, her face painted like an Indian, and who thinks she is smart? She'll only make his life miserable by wanting her own way all the time, thinking she knows more than him and never satisfied. They don't want to serve him, make him happy. They want everything for themselves. They're not interested in making the home comfortable and cheerful. No, they want to be on the go all the time. They can't sit down and be quiet. They begin to fret because they must sit at home every evening. If he's contented, why shouldn't she be? Let him sit at home and read in peace. Be happy to know he's sitting near. Why do they like girls who listen to jokes and tell them? Oh, a quiet girl with a pure clean mind who would make a sweet loving wife for some young man, must stand by and never be noticed. They say they want a quiet girl. But the minute they do happen to find one, they think they are being bored to death because she refuses to smoke, pet, etc. Are there no other things to do? Why do they run from a decent girl? Believe me if they marry the other kind, they'll be worse than bored afterwards. CONTENTED.

The wife you describe is surely an ideal one, my dear, but I am afraid few modern girls care to be so self-sacrificing and generous. And, to tell the truth, few modern men expect to have their every wish anticipated and their every idea agreed with. They really prefer a wife who is an interesting companion, even though she does argue with him occasionally and wants her own way once in a while. Naturally, no man wants his wife to be a drinker or petter, but he doesn't want a doormat, either.

Downhearted

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of your column and think your advice is wonderful. I am a fairly good-looking young man, well dressed, but seem to be unable to get acquainted with some nice young woman. I run around with a fellow that is about 7 inches taller than I, and we think that is the reason why we have no girl friends. Please, Miss Gale, let me know if size makes any difference when going out with girls. DOWNHEARTED.

If you are an interesting companion, size makes no difference, Downhearted. Be courteous, agreeable and considerate and girls will like you.

For Shapely Legs

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

NOW we come to the third exercise in the routine for the development of lovely limbs. What, you're not interested? Shame on you! Every woman should be interested in having pretty legs, especially since the fashions prevent us from covering them up if they are homely. Oh, you were just fooling? All right, I thought you were. The work is getting harder, but what is a little hard work when the results will be so charming?

Kneel on the floor, keeping the torso erect with the chest raised, the shoulders back, the head up and the hands resting on the hips. The lower limbs should be pressed flat against the floor even unto the toes. The heels should be together and should be kept in that position. Now bend slowly backward until the back of the head touches the floor. Didn't I tell you it would be a mean one?

I don't expect you to be able to really touch the head to the floor the first few times you try the exercise. In fact, you'll be an extremely fortunate person if you are able to do this exercise, correctly and easily, after two weeks of daily trying. But keep at it, going as far back as you can each time.

If you are not familiar with exercising, or the more unusual forms of exercise as the one described above, you'll probably feel as though you just can't make the grade. But once you've let go of yourself and find that you really can control your body under the most surprising actions, you'll not only have no more fears, but you'll enjoy doing the exercises immensely.

I remember well when I first tried to do the "squat" exercise. I thought I just couldn't let my body down. Several failures led me to try hanging on to the foot of the bed while I lowered my body. This simplified matters greatly and soon I had courage enough to try squatting without hanging on to the bed. From then on it was easy.

And this reminds me of something that will help you to master the bending back exercise outlined above. Place a chair so that, as you bend backward, your head will rest in the seat. Use this aid for a couple of days until you can confidently bend backward to meet the chair. Then substitute a lower chair or stool and repeat the same thing. By the fifth day you should be able to bend back to within six inches of the floor. Then try bending back as far as you can without aid of any kind except your own will power and flexible muscles.

Incidentally, this exercise trims down the thighs, waistline and back, besides shaping the lower limbs into lovely curves,

STOP BAD BREATH

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after-effects.

Olive Tablets bring no griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil—you will know them by their olive color. Take nightly for a week and note the effect. 15c, 30c, 60c. All druggists.

Pirates Break Season's Records for Both Major Leagues With 21 Hits — Individual And Club Averages Soar — Giant Home-Run Streak Stopped

THE baseball fates shift quickly, and 24 hours made a vast difference in the batting of the Pirates. Whereas on Thursday they could not make even an outfield fly when it would have meant victory for them in the first game of the series with the Braves, the Bushmen stepped out to record figures yesterday in burying the New England outfit under a score of 13 to 3.

Paul Waner

In making 21 hits, the Buccaneers smashed all big league records for the season to date. The previous high mark in the National League for one game was 19 hits, made by the Braves against the Phillies on April 30, and equaled by the Giants in their slugfest in Cincinnati yesterday. The largest number of hits made by a club in an American League game was 18, amassed by Cleveland against Detroit on April 29.

SO IN bombarding Greenfield, Genewich and Edwards for 21 safe blows yesterday, the Corsairs set up a new hit record for the other major league clubs to shoot at. Their own previous best record was 16, made against the Cubs here last Monday.

In breaking the record of the year for hits, however, Donie Bush's bludgeoneers did not even scratch the mark for total bases on hits. That belongs to their victims of yesterday, the Bostonese, who made a total of 36 sacks by including five doubles and four homers among their 19 wallops at Philadelphia on April 30. This is the season's best record for both leagues. The Pirates totaled only 29 yesterday.

PIRATE batting averages went soaring again yesterday. Punch 'Em Paul Waner headed the Corsair attack with a triple, two doubles and a single in six times up, boosting his average at .392. Pie Traynor contributed three singles and a double, making his average .338. George Grantham drew one point nearer to the .500 mark, rising to .483. Burleigh Grimes, who is one of the leading hitters as well as one of the leading pitchers, elevated his mark to .476, and Lloyd Waner jumped to .329. Perhaps there is nothing in association, and maybe hitting is not contagious, but on Thursday Adam Comorosky became Pie Traynor's teammate and yesterday the Polish boy showed symptoms of having contracted the habit by making three hits. He also made a sacrifice fly and drew a base on balls, a perfect record for the day. Pittsburgh's club batting average for the season rose to .326.

SKIPPER BUSH and his ballers are hopeful that the routing of Kent Greenfield yesterday means the passing of another jinx.

Kent Greenfield

Greenfield was only ordinarily effective against the Bucs while he was wearing Giant livery, but after going to the Braves he became one of the most difficult pitchers in the league for the locals to beat, as Bob Smith of the same team used to be.

THE former Giant was making only his second start yesterday and was knocked out in the first inning. His first start was against Brooklyn on April 27 in the game in which Jumbo Elliott shut out the Braves and allowed only three hits. Greenfield was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh inning on that occasion. Illness has had much to do with holding him back this season.

HERB PENNOCK, the Yankee southpaw star with the ball-bearing action, is showing the way to all other hurlers in the two leagues. Pennock is starting out with a remarkable record that has no equal in either league. When he beat the White Sox yesterday it marked his fifth consecutive win and his slate is still unmarred by a defeat. Not only that, but Pennock has gone the full distance in all of his five games, except one that was cut to six innings by rain in Boston on April 19. At that Pennock has never been taken out and therefore must be credited with five complete games.

Sammy Gray of the Browns is the only other hurler who has won five games, but he did not register his victories in a row, losing his third game of the year to Detroit.

Babe Ruth

BABE RUTH was three days and one game behind his schedule of 1927 in making his sixth home run of 1928 yesterday. Last season the Bambino registered No. 6 on the first of May, and it was the Yanks' fifteenth game of this season, whereas this year he made his sixth on May 4 and in the world champions' sixteenth game of the campaign.

WHILE on the subject of home runs, a feature of yesterday in the National was the stopping of a sensational four-base hitting threat of the Giants by the Reds.

Not only do the Giants lead all other clubs in the two leagues with a total of 19 to their credit, but they had made the remarkable record of hitting one or more home runs in every one of nine straight games prior to yesterday. Twelve homers all told were piled up in the nine games, but the big park in Cincinnati kept the McGrawites from fattening the record they had made by reason of the trick stands and fences in New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

ANOTHER hard blow was suffered by the Pirates yesterday, when it was learned that the services of one of the

MAKES CLUB LOOK GOOD

Rogers Hornsby, who was manager of the St. Louis Cardinals when they won the National League pennant in 1926, played last year with the New York Giants and now is the second baseman of the Boston Braves, here for a series with the Pirates, hasn't changed much with all of his changing of clubs. He still is the peppery fighter of yore and still the slugging hitter of liners that carom off the fences. The Braves look like a sure enough first division club built around him.

INTENSIVE training is having its results in the Pirate camp. There is strong likelihood that the 21 safe wallops scattered to all parts of Forbes Field yesterday, as the Bushwhackers downed the Braves, was a pleasing and quick reaction to new morning practice policy which is being strictly adhered to at Forbes Field these delightful May days.

In any event, the Pirates look the champions they are supposed to be. The hammer-and-tongs drive dished up for the second clash with the Tribe was a reminder of the Buccos at their best.

The Waner Act was on with many encores, Paul and Lloyd hammering out seven hits. The kingpin batter showed Rogers Hornsby how it is done by clouting out a three-bagger, two doubles and a single. Sprout came through with a double and two singles while Capt. Traynor flailed the rocket for four hits, including a double. Adam Comorosky again starred for the

THE spikes of 1,000 high school athletes will flash and pound over the cinders and turf of the Tartan Bowl here today as teams from three states and 50 institutions vie for honor and glory in the annual Carnegie Tech interscholastic track and field championships.

Led by the defending and 1927 champions, the Central High team of Columbus, O., athletes from that state, West Virginia and from the tri-state and eastern sections of this commonwealth have been pouring into the city since early yesterday, until all available accommodation on the Skibo campus has been taken.

Records in both track and field events are expected to fall under the determined assaults that will be made on them by the high school stars today. A dry track, well suited for record shattering performances, greeted the early morning preliminary and qualifying contestants.

While the high schoolers are competing here, the Carnegie Tech and Pitt varsity track and field teams are out of town for dual meets. The Tartans will meet Geneva College at

PIRATE STAR NEW LEAGUE SENSATION

The batting and all-round play of George Grantham, Pirate first baseman, have been the sensation of the National League so far this season. He is leading the league in the matter of his batting average, being close to the .500 mark and is up near the top in the home run depart ment, while he is setting the pace in driving i runs. In the field and on the bases his work ha left nothing to be desired.

HENRI COCHET DEFEATED

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng., May 5.—(AP.)—Henri Cochet, Wimbledon champion, was eliminated from the all-England hard court tennis championship by Patrick D. B. Spence, who has represented South Africa for several years in Davis cup play, 5-7, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 9-7.

C. C. Pyle In New Mixup

JOLIET, Ill., May 5.—(AP.)—Plodding through intermittent rain, E. D. Gardner, sturdy Seattle runner, jumped from sixth to fifth place in the transcontinental foot race by winning yesterday's 59.1-mile lap from Pontiac, Ill., to Joliet.

Today's lap was the longest since the race began at Los Angeles, March 4. Gardner's time was 7:45:52. Guisto Umek of Trieste, Italy, finished second in the long lap, easily retaining eighth place. His time was 7:54:25.

Peter Gavuzzi of Southampton, England, who is leading the field of 71 runners, boosted his margin over his nearest opponent, Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla., by finishing the lap in a tie for third place with Olli Wanttinen of New York, Roy McMurty of Indianapolis and John Sala of Passaic, N. J. Their time was 8:10:16. Payne tied for seventh place in the lap with Philip Granville, Hamilton, Ont., in 8:51:38.

C. C. Pyle, promoter of the race, no sooner escaped one legal thrust than he was confronted with another. After getting back his famous "land yacht," a 12-ton truck equipped with every convenience of a modern home, which was taken from him at Elwood Wednesday on a writ of attachment, he was made defendant in a $2,000 damage suit brought in a Chicago court by Valeska Suratt, erstwhile film actress, who charges Pyle owes her that amount for securities she entrusted to his care. The "land yacht" was returned to Pyle on a writ of replevin, obtained by a firm which said it was merely renting the car to him.

At New York—Joe Glick defeated Lope Tenorio, 10 rounds; Andre Routis defeated Sammy Dorfman, 10 rounds; Frisco Grande won on foul from Ernie Jarvis, 2 rounds.

BUCS, ROBINS LOSE PROTESTS

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP.)—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, has denied protests of Brooklyn and Pittsburgh, on games lost respectively to Boston and Chicago, basing his decisions on the "judgment of the umpire," the protests of the games were based, as the president saw them, on matters of accuracy of judgment of the umpires and not violations of the playing rules of the game.

Brooklyn protested a game lost to Boston April 16 on the ground that Pitcher Robertson of the Braves should have been put out of the game for using a sticky substance on the ball.

Pittsburgh protested a defeat by Chicago April 22 with a claim that a hit by Riggs Stephenson should have been ruled a two-base drive under the prevailing ground rules of the day. He made three bases and later scored the winning run.

LOUGHRAN TO GIVE VICTOR CHANCE

NEW YORK, May 5.—(AP.)—Pete Latzo, Scranton miner, who lost the welterweight championship and then jumped into the light-heavyweight class, will meet Leo Lomski of Aberdeen, Wash., in the main 10-round bout at Ebbets Field, home of the Brooklyn Dodgers, on May 30, Humbert J. Fugazy has announced.

Tex Rickard's local rival will open his outdoor season with a 10-round bout at the same park on May 23, when Sammy Baker, Mitchel Field soldier, and Nick Testo of Troy, N. Y., will fight for recognition as logical contender among the welterweights. The New York State Athletic Commission recently named this pair as the outstanding challenging welterweights when Ace Hudkins refused a match with the class champion, Joe Dundee.

Fugazy has the agreement of Tommy Loughran, light-heavyweight champion, to fight the winner of the Lomski-Latzo bout. Dundee, although under contract with the Madison Square Garden, can sign to defend his title for Fugazy if the latter also signs the challenger.

Beaver Falls this afternoon and Pitt is at Morgantown, W. Va., for a battle with West Virginia.

On the Pitt Stadium track, the Panther freshmen team opens the season with a meet with the West Virginia frosh, the Pitt varsity netters oppose Dickinson in a recquet match and the Tartan court team meets the alumni.

Yesterday all three local collegiate tennis teams scored triumphs. The Panthers defeated Wash-Jeff at Little Washington by a 5 to 2 score. The Dukes took the lead in the Conference tennis race by defeating the champion Westminster netters, 4-3, in a close engagement, and the Tartans won over Dickinson, 5 to 1.

PIRATES

Corsairs. The Flying Pole connected for three singles, a sacrifice liner and he drew a base on balls.

GRIMES HOLDS BRAVES

The upshot of all the pretty stick work was a 13 to 3 victory with Burleigh Grimes starring on the mound and at bat. The sturdy spitballer held Boston to nine hits and he continued his fine work with the hickory by smashing out a double and a single. In all of the six contests in which he has participated, Grimes has driven the ball to safe territory.

Today, in an effort to take the third game of the series and insure their getting an even break in the series, the Pirates will face the Braves with Joe Dawson on the mound. Boston is expected to counter with Bob Smith, the reformed infielder. The Braves will be out for revenge today, and may make it a tough afternoon for Col. Joe and the Buccos.

Manager Jack Slattery sent Kent Greenfield, a 1927 Pirate bugaboo, to the mound at the start of the encounter, but the Kentuckian was among the missing before the first round was complete. With one out and the home team in the midst of a tally, Joe Genewich tried to rescue his mate.

SPORT COMMENT

club's pitching aces would be lost for five days or longer. Carmen Hill is in bad shape and will require complete rest for some time.

Hill's injured back and some other hurts began to bother him again after he had pitched and beaten the Cubs on Tuesday, and that night he went to Linesville, Pa., to consult the specialist who had treated him previously this spring, as well as last season.

THE specialist expressed the opinion that Hill would recover in due time, but said that he must take no chances on pitching too soon, and that he must be rested up for from five days to a week. He said that Hill might be ready to pitch in the final game of the New York series but not before.

The loss of Hill is a severe blow to the league champions, as he appeared to be just rounding into the form that has won him a place among the best hurlers in the league.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

THERE are three outstanding events on tonight's radio schedule. Two are local features and the other is the Blue network broadcast of the All-American Radio Team program.

Station WCAE is celebrating its fifth birthday tonight. Throughout the day and tonight special programs are being presented. These will be climaxed at 1 a. m., with the presentation of the Stanley-Davis-Clark review from the studio of WCAE in the Stanley Theater. Local entertainers as well as theatrical players will be featured.

The Amen Corner banquet, honoring Eugene L. Connelly, retiring president of this unique group, will be broadcast over WCAE at 8 p. m. Among the speakers will be Edgar A. Guest, poet; Rev. Warren Giles, of East Orange, N. J.; Sir Frederick McGill, English humorist; Rev. Lawrence A. O'Connel, of the Church of the Epiphany; Rev. Hugh Thompson Kerr, of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, and James F. Burke. The chairman will be David L. Lawrence, who will introduce Dennis A. Harris, the toastmaster.

The All-American Radio Team broadcast will be heard over the Blue network, including KDKA, at 8 p. m. The team is made up of representative artists from every form of radio entertainment—from symphony orchestra to dance band, organist to jazz piano player, comedian to poet, and early morning performer to midnight star.

Members of the team include the National Cavaliers; South Sea Islanders; Frank Munn, tenor; Harry Reser, banjo; Smalle and Robertson, novelty duo; Malcolm La Prade, travel; Wilfred Glenn, bass; Godfrey Ludlow, violin; Jessica Dragonette, lyric soprano; Mildred Hunt, crooner; Merle Johnston, saxophone; Genia Zielinska, Devora Nadworney, Giuseppe di Benedetto and Theodore Webb, grand opera quartet; Happiness Boys, comedy duo; B. A. Rolfe, trumpeter; Gerald Stopp, producer; A. K. Glee Club; Charles Magnante, accordion; May Singhi Breen and Peter de Rose, mixed duo; Lucien Schmidt, 'cello; Kathleen Stewart, piano; Utica Jubilee Singers; Joe Green, xylophone; National Symphony Orchestra; Genia Zielinska, coloratura soprano; Stefano di Stefano, harp; Phil Cook, comedian, and Edwin Frank Goldman, band leader.

THE GREATEST ADVENTURE STORY OF MODERN TIMES

Bootlegging Slaves and Rubber on West Coast

Trader Horn Feelingly Describes the Cruelty of Bondage for the Natives

What Has Gone Before.

Trader Horn, writing at 73, recounts his adventures among the cannibals of Africa over half a century ago and tells how he met Nina T——, the white goddess to the Isorga, and discovered that she came of an aristocratic English family. He also discovers a beautiful ruby (which he prepares to steal and substitute an imitation) in the josh house during a ceremony in which he is made a member of a native secret society, the first and only white man to be so honored. He tells how the Evilis get rid of their aged women and sings the praises of Miss Hasken, the American missionary.

Liquor's Superiority Over Guns

By ALFRED ALOYSIUS HORN

Edited by ETHELREDA LEWIS

CHAPTER XXI.

I WAS kept very busy for a few days visiting traders in various places in the mountains on each side of the river below the falls. I found one of our Mpangue traders away out on the big slave road and as he was a smart shrewd business man he very willingly showed me his reason for being there. All the natives who came by these roads with rubber or other produce paid Ibango or toll to the Evili King, and this toll amounted to quite one-sixth of the value of the produce.

ALFRED A. HORN

No native coming from the interior was allowed to sell without coming into the town and must be accompanied by one of the citizens whilst selling and the toll was handed over immediately the purchase was made. Many of the natives would creep into this man's store and, although they ran the risk of losing their purchases, they would take a chance and sell their rubber either at the store or in the thick brush around it.

The exchange was made very rapidly, and the trader got rich by this illicit business, which went on night and day. This was rubber smuggling. Slave traders also made a good business smuggling the slaves by circuitous routes to their boats. These slaves were examined much after the fashion of a trader examining an animal. The most particular attention was paid to a slave's eyes. Those who had the evil eye were discarded. This disease or fault was called Devil's Eye.

Slavery and Rubber

Slaves were cheap, as the oversea trade in them was practically at an end. After the American war of the North and South there was a strict watch kept on the Old West Coast slavery posts, especially by the British whose gunboats continually patrolled the coast and showed no mercy to slavers. This was a boon to the large trading houses as the slaves were generally put to rubber cutting and that was the reason for the boom in rubber trade.

Many useless slaves were drowned or done away with after their usefulness as rubber cutters was over. A slaver would often buy a father, son or wife, and leave the girl's mother behind and as the old woman was aged she was generally drowned. This practice of drowning the aged kept the crocodiles and fish well supplied with food in the Angani River.

I made daily visits to the old king and we became great friends. I told him one day that I wanted to proceed up the river above the falls as I wanted to see the white hippos I heard were to be found between the falls and Ashiwa (Ashira?) which I would also like to visit and to see them make the famous Ashiwa daggers and razors.

He did not seem to relish this idea as the privilege had never been accorded to a white man and this was a strict rule, but he would call his chiefs and would do his best for me. As I was quite a professional coaxer and promised not to do anything without his knowledge, this request was granted especially as I promised to do no trading or to interfere in any way with the sole right of trade he possessed.

Relic of Du Chaillu

Paul du Chaillu, the man who had written a book on gorilla hunting, was stopped at Samba Falls and that was as far as he was allowed to travel. Here was found one of his compasses and an old musical box which had belonged to him, whilst the Evili boys who hunted for him lived near the falls.

All my routine work being finished, I bade adieu to the old King and had my large canoe pulled up to the other side of the falls and, leaving a crowd of traders, slavers, etc., behind, I pulled up and across the river to an Ivea town. I was made welcome here by the head witch doctor and chief. This was a celebrated religious town and here I saw an old doctor carving a rather hideous wooden god.

These gods were in great demand amongst the Ivelis and other natives as they were supposed to ward off evil spirits. Here I had the pleasure of buying the largest gorilla skull I have ever seen, and this was supposed to have great power in spirit land and as I was an Isoga (egbo) man I had no difficulty in becoming the owner of it.

The purchase price was three bottles of trade gin and a few other articles of trade. I eventually sent this to Gerrard, College Lane, Camden Town, London, and I realized the best figure I ever had for a gorilla's skull.

Sacred White Hippo

At the entrance of a small creek or river we came on the white hippos but as they were shy I did not get a chance of seeing them at their best, although one big fellow rose close to us and had a very light snout; I had no chance of seeing the rest of his body but the portion of his head that showed up was certainly much lighter than the common hippo, and as they were sacred I left them religiously alone as far as shooting was concerned.

I spent a couple of days amongst the Ashira tribe and they were highly amused to see a white man. I watched the manufacture of daggers, etc., which were splendidly made and I bought a few fine samples which I shipped to friends in England.

The rubber cut here is called flake, and is of an inferior quality to the Ogowe rubber. I heard that the Portuguese convicts who had large quantities of slaves cut a large quantity of rubber south of Ashira and as these convicts were hard taskmasters and cruel to the poor natives, they had robbed and slaughtered their masters, and the country was in a state of ferment as these slaves were well armed and had declared their freedom which they were well able to hold. This was a good country to keep out of I thought.

I was well received by the old king and the inhabitants of Samba Falls and as my business was all transacted making a full report of what I had seen and heard I made immediate preparations for a voyage up the big river the Ogowe.

My trip above Samba Falls and amongst the mountains was a surprise to Mr. Sinclair, who had always surmised that the river was the one and only route required to double the output of the Anjuni. But when he saw the map I drew of the big slave roads with their various branches he completely altered his views and congratulated me.

When I explained that the only shot or weapon I had found necessary was the bottle he smiled. The bottle had won and made friends where the use of weapons would never have won a complete victory and would have created everlasting ill feeling, and as Sinclair was a devout Presbyterian I never mentioned to him the great use to me of the power of Isorga.

Next I visited Carl Woormans and received such a lot of packages from little Peru as well as home letters I was forced to laugh. After reading my home correspondence I turned to little Peru's, who had sent two registered letters, one of which contained four 50-pound bank of England notes.

Fake Ruby Received

The first package I opened contained three imitation rubies well imitating the rough stone in the temple of Izoga, one especially came quite near being an exact duplicate. He had also sent a small camera and lens, some plates and also tin type outfit, nitrate of silver, collodion, bath, etc.; also a book of directions how to use same, likewise dark folding tent, etc.

I also received a small electric battery with which caused endless amusement amongst the natives. Next case contained two pairs of ladies' shoes, a couple of ladies' dresses and a pair of boxing gloves. I thought Herr Shiff would never recover from laughing when I unearthed the pair of silk dresses, in fact Herr Boome, his assistant, could not resist coming in on our solitude and on sight of the slippers and dresses; he too laughed outrageously. I left Herr Shiffs after dinner and he was still laughing as also was his assistant. After locking up all in my canoe locker I bade them a fond au revoir.

(Again Trader Horn takes occasion to comment on his adventures and to add a store of interesting spoken facts to his written narrative.)

Gorillas "Choicy"

"That was an outstanding gorilla's head I bought above Samba Falls. One o' the best. Aye, I did well with Gerrards, Camden Town, one time and another. Cross, Liverpool, too, and some of the zoos'd take all sorts from me. The easiest way in the end is to catch 'em as infants and keep a slave girl for foster-mother. But she'd have not to feed her own child at the same time—the monkey'd kill it. Fearful rages they exhibit even in childhood. Very choicey about the woman being clean, too. A gorilla's like humans in that way—can't stand the natural perfume of the Negro. Aye, if she didn't wash herself between every feed he'd not take the breast at all. Get sulky about it. They're rare ones for the sulks. Human as a man in that respect. If any philosopher were to give it thought he'd see there's nothing brings us closer akin to the apes than the tantrums we get into.

"Taking the infants from the mother? Hard enough, I admit, but the mother can get another child. No child can replace a fond mother. Only once I shot a mother—I think I've mentioned it. When she was dying she lifted her hand and put it on the baby. She—lifted her hand . . . No man that's not homo stultus could stand it.

"I tried to make amends to outraged Nature. I gave the little one to one of the traders to bring up for me. Left him 30 shillings to get proper feeding for it from one of the slave women. Or it might have been two pounds. Meaning to let it loose when it was old enough—paying my debt to that poor mother that asked for pity. But it died in captivity.

"Aye, I sold some thousands of pounds worth in Europe—one thing and another. Chimpanzees are nice creatures to train. I had one for about a year and then I sold her to Crosses and they disposed of her to Manchester. I never knew it but she recognized me one day when I was walking through the zoo there at Bellevue to see what they'd got.

"When I was in England it seemed a bit of home to go and look at the animals. Aye, she knew me, after three years—made a strange sound and leapt about and tried to touch me through the bars. I had a great talk with her and we soon had a big crowd listening to us. I knew her again by a mark on one of her arms. Aye, Ma'am. I met no one in Manchester I liked so well. I'd 'a' liked to take her back with me. I'd never seen one of my own catches togged up in a zoo. A very peculiar sensation it gave me. I never felt quite so keen afterwards on packing them to Europe alive. Dead and in spirits—that's harmful to no man.

"But there's always a risk in shipping anything in spirits. A man's a man for all that and you'll not find sailors differing from the rules of common humanity. They put Nelson in spirits after the battle. But when the keg was unpacked in London by the Admiralty authorities there wasn't a drop left. Bone dry. An unpleasant episode, when a man's saved his country, but they gave him St. Paul's as soon as they could. Aye.

Slavery's Cruelty

"'Tis a terrible thing for a lad new from school to see the slaves being examined before sold. Such and indignity as could never be matched in any hospital. The Doctor being a scientific will understand better. There are things I could scarcely mention to a lady. I shall have to mention it to him.

"They'd never try to keep families together, those traders. 'Twas a terrible thing to see them being separated. When a savage loses his kin his heart breaks. He's got no newspapers and these so-called cinemas to cheer him up. All he knows of pleasure comes, not from food, but from eating it with his kind. Not from hunting, but from hunting with his tribe. He pines like a dog. The first thing education teaches you is to walk alone. Aye, you can sure stand on your own spear when you've learnt the word goodbye, and say it clear.

"Aye, I must 'a' been the first man to try the river above Samba Falls. Where du Chaillu failed, I succeeded. When you're young and life's a bit of laughable fun, you can get your way easy enough. Too much Latin about du Chaillu. They've never had the knack of youth. As soon as Nature makes 'em into men, they stop laffing. One of the greatest obstacles whether on the Coast or in Lancashire is to stop laughter."

Gas Bandits Give Way to Hay Thieves

The customary parade of youths confessing to automobile thefts was interrupted in Criminal Court by an old-fashioned plea of guilty to the theft of four bales of hay for a horse.

Frank Cole, 18, and Charles Whilley, 18, of Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, rag pickers, admitted taking the hay, worth $16, owned by Peter Blumling, conducting a feed store at 321 Linden street, McKees Rocks, April 30, for their horse. They were paroled for one year by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen.

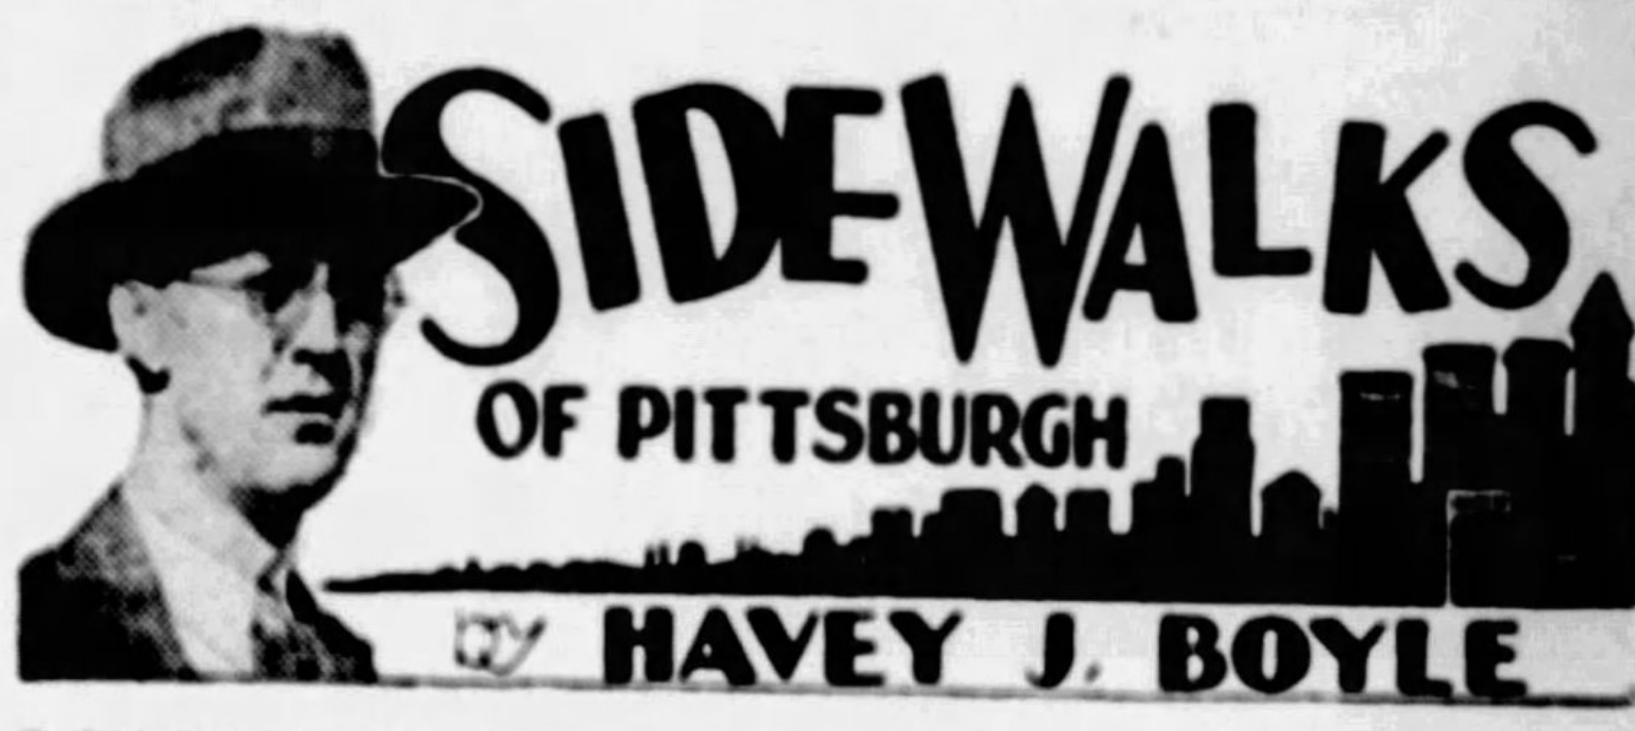
QUIZ POLICEMAN IN BOY'S SLAYING

Coroner W. J. McGregor today ordered Lieut. Belmont Pugh, of Wilkinsburg, brought in "for examination" following the death last night of Charles Beattie, 19, of 5116 Kincaid street, shot early Sunday after the Columbia Pharmacy, Penn and Trenton avenues, Wilkinsburg, had been robbed.

Lieut. Pugh had reported that he fired on Beattie and four other young men whom he saw driving away from the robbed store.



SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

BY HAVEY J. BOYLE

MY DEAR SIR: I enjoyed your comment on the marathon dance, and was glad to know that you like the common people, for that's my gang, too. I not only belong to the common people, but I teach them as well in the elementary grades. Whether their future leads to honor, to oblivion, to crime, or to ordinary honest work, all must follow the early paths I point out. Sometimes I feel that I should like to join the ranks of the Junior High where some of the common herd have been eliminated and where teachers draw a thousand a year more for instructing superior groups. And the Senior High is even more attractive, for here the common element has almost entirely disappeared, and another salary is added to salaries for the glory of directing brain power. But, for a paltry couple of thousands who would miss the thrill of teaching common folk, descendants of red-blooded ancestry from whose ranks are drawn queens of romance, peers of movies, heroes of wild adventure, and those who, triumphing over poverty, greed and vice, fortified by faith, hope and charity, lead their faithful bands to victories? . . . It is these common people who in the long run, make the city, the county and the community what it is. And I am a common teacher of that common crowd. Signed: A City Teacher.

YES, and wasn't it Lincoln who said this government was of the people, of the people, and of the people? No, that doesn't sound right, but you doubtless know which quotation we mean. It was something about the people, at any rate.

COUNCILMAN DAN WINTERS is to be honored at a reception and dance in Palm Garden next Monday night. Johnny Jones will be the master of ceremonies. Palm Garden stirs the reminiscent blood. That was where Dan Hamill used to stage the Capacious Club dances, which, in their time, were what later came to be known as the berries. Autos for such use were rare then, and the boys and girls after the dances boarded chartered street cars to take them home. The girls wore boudoir caps, or so they seemed, and the boys were real cut-ups with peg-top trousers and coats that slanted point-wise toward the knees.

At that time gin was something that caused suspicion and the only drink available at the dance was lemonade and orangeade. Still, there was always some deviltry afoot—as witness the moonlight dances, when all but a single light would be turned out, while an orchestra more noted for a piano and a violin, than for a saxaphone, issued forth a melody that caused the girls to sigh happily and the boys to say to themselves: "By gosh, I believe I'm tired of running around like this, I wanna settle down."

* * *

OF COURSE, Palm Garden was not the only place where the middle class boys and girls congregated at such affairs. Melwood, hard by Neville street, was considered a pretty classy place, too. The cost was slightly prohibitive, as it cost the boy friend about three frogskins, counting carfare, but it was worth it..

* * *

THOSE boys and girls of such dancing clubs have dashed into their late thirties and early forties now. The girls used to say artfully, "Now, ain't he the limit," referring to their escorts who were cutting up. Well, they all got married and lived happily ever after, and the same girls are saying about the same boys, now slightly bald and all that sort of thing: "He IS the Limit," with a different emphasis.

WHEN we refer to times of the past we must be careful. Recently we wrote of a visit Bob Ingersoll made to Pittsburgh. We got it from history, of course, but we were misunderstood and a few staunch Welshmen from the South Side send word by Joe Kane that since they are now 60 and cannot remember Ingersoll's visit how in the world do we get that way. To straighten out the matter, therefore, let it be said that when Mr. Ingersoll came here in 1875 we were only 45 years old. We trust this clears up the matter.

JERRY

Saxon Realizes That He Loves Jerry, but Does She Still Love Him?

"I MUST send you that little book, Saxon, of Dorothy Parker's—'Enough Rope.' It will supply you with wistful words for sad situations."

"Jerry, do you ever regret that we didn't marry?"

"I did at first. But not now. The parting was touching enough as it was. It would have been much harder if we'd been married."

"We wouldn't have parted then. I would have been faithful."

"As a duty—yes—I believe you would. But how you would have chafed!

"The only kind of fidelity that's worth a damn in my opinion, is the kind that isn't conscious of its loyalty. To be aware that you are faithful is to be unfaithful because it is to be mentally looking over the fence and longing to jump."

"I wouldn't have looked over the fence."

"Oh, Saxon! As long as you lived you would have looked over that fence and wondered with blistering unrest about the color and mad, vivid sweets denied you. You would have felt robbed. The mind's right to test by experience the heights and the depths!

"To me, nothing could be more humiliating than a husband chafing in his fidelity. I could more gaily live with a brazen cheater than with a resentful prisoner."

"You think all this playing around was inevitable?"

"It seems so, doesn't it?"

"But I've had no time for it in the last eight months. And no taste for it!"

"And tomorrow your exile ends?"

"I don't think so, Jerry. I don't want it to end."

She reached over for her purse.

"Don't go. I'm tired and feel like talking."

"It's nearly seven."

"It can't be—!" A flush—almost of anger mounted to his forehead. "Will you come in again, then? Come Monday—I'm going to send these plans Monday night. That's about the last moment.

"Jerry—I saw your picture. Sylvia told me about it." He gave a boyish shrug. "I put a deposit on it. It's a pip!"

She was a little surprised that he now seemed anxious for her to leave . . . he hurried her to the door . . . "Come in Monday—will you?"

He did not send Jerry away quite soon enough.

CHAPTER LXX.

HE went over to the draughting board where Jerry had stood. He visualized her with that flush on her cheek, the sketch held out before her. He fancied a pride, her voice thrilling with warm, tender pride when she said so quietly: "You've written your poem, Saxon. It's magnificent."

He flushed and took a deep, exultant breath. She was looking up to him—this new, fiercely independent, aloof Jerry. She was tremulous with pride.

Was this all that remained of her young, passionate adoration? How coolly she looked back at it. How shrewd was her appraisement of him and herself, even to that blunt, astonishing decision that a marriage between them would certainly have failed. So it was well they had not tried it.

Was her mind as definite as her [illegible]? And she held no loitering [illegible]? No wish for a return of [illegible] wildly sweet emotion?

She was so very self-sufficient; so humorously impersonal about it. This piqued him. That faintly derisive banter of hers challenged him to reassert his power, conquer her anew.

But deeper than this—far deeper was the sense of loss he now felt . . . an acute physical loss. He wanted her to be standing here at the draughting board regarding his work with that still intensity, her whole face shining with understanding. He wanted to hear her soft, excited murmurs.

He had always liked having her here—radiant, comradely, inspiring.

Suddenly he recalled her attitude when his hand covered hers and he reminded her that she had once so loved him. She bantered, but she had not raised her eyes nor kept the husky lilt from her voice.

Did she care for him yet? Could she care for him?

He was aware of a heat, a surging unrest. He wanted her to care for him; wanted this intensely. Different from all other women—fearless, fiery, unassailable. What an intoxication to be loved by this new, aloof, tantalizing Jerry; have her come with that passionate and beautiful defiance and offer flame-sweet eyes swimming with adoration to his.

He was lost in these fancies.

A hand was laid on his arm, a whiff of perfume in his face: "And I didn't tiptoe in, either! Dreaming of me, love?"

"Oh—I expected you earlier—at 7."

"I've been here some five minutes, old dear. You know I can't bear to interrupt you. Besides, it was fun watching the expression on your face. Were you really loving your work with those warm looks? Or waiting with wild impatience for me?"

"Interpret them to suit yourself. You will, anyway."

"Then you were yearning for me! How goes it? Are they finished at last?"

"They'll be finished tomorrow."

"Another tomorrow? You promised to end them today. And we'd celebrate tonight. I'm all keyed up for it."

Mary Eunice looked enchanting in an evening dress of sapphire blue which her drooping sable coat revealed. There were dark, luring shadows about her violet eyes. But her full lips now took on a pensive quiet and she began to trace figures with her forefinger on the draughting board.

She expected him to comfort her; to apologize . . . at the very least to explain.

But he said: "I didn't promise anything of the kind. I couldn't."

"And if we go out to dinner and to dance, you'll be impatient and resentful the whole night."

"I will. I've no intention of going dancing tonight."

She gave him a sharp, challenging look. "You're getting terribly rude. It's a good thing this contest ends before your sweet ways are entirely lost. Didn't you say we'd celebrate when you were finished?"

"Yes."

"And didn't you expect to finish the damn things today?"

He laughed. "That was my hope."

"Oh, well—there's no use quarreling about it now, when I've put up with so much for the last six or eight months."

"Have you put up with a great deal, Mary?"

"Well—I should hope to shout I have. I'd like to see any other man treat me the way you have. You could at least say you're sorry I'm disappointed. I stayed home from a week-end just to be with you."

"I'm sorry about that, Mary."

"But you want to work tonight and tomorrow."

"I've got to."

She came up and put her hand on his arm, turning her face to his. She was almost as tall as he, and her warm, shadowed eyes now smiled into his.

"All right, big boy, you go ahead and work. I'll go home and be lonesome. You'll give me tomorrow night, then, and no strings to it?"

"Tomorrow night, Mary?"

She stood a moment gazing into his eyes—wooing him.

He laughed and kissed her.

With her arms about his neck, she asked casually: "Who was the girl you were entertaining just before me?"

"I wasn't ENTERTAINING any girl!"

"All right. Who was the girl who was here with you just before I arrived?"

"I'll bite, Mary. Who was she?"

"I saw a girl going down the hall just as I came from the elevator."

"Perhaps you saw Miss Marjorie Green, the stenographer in the next office."

"Do stenographers work till 7 o'clock on Saturday evening?"

"Miss Brown was typing till then."

Mary regarded him narrowly: "Saxon—you're not double-crossing me?"

"Why should I?"

"No reason since things are as they are between us!" She gave a soft, triumphant laugh, closing her lips warmly on his. "So much until tomorrow!"

He felt a vague disquiet. An hour passed before he could return to his work.

* * *

Sunday night an appealing and very gentle Mary sat opposite Saxon at dinner. She reached over and put her hand in his: "Been a long, hard grind, big boy. You'll win, won't you?"

"I doubt it."

Her eyes widened: "I thought you were sure of it?"

"Sure of my hopes. About 500 other fellows for all I know may be just as sure."

"Oh, well—it won't matter. If you don't win this, you'll win something else, Saxon—you'll take a rest now, won't you?"

"I'll ease up a little."

Mary turned radiant soft eyes on his—a young-girl eagerness on her lips. She leaned a little toward him and asked, taunting: "Shall we?"

"What?"

"Don't be stupid, love! Shall we take that rest together—you and I?"

"Meaning exactly what, Mary?"

She bit her lips in a sudden swift anger. After a hot pause she asked bitingly: "Just what are we waiting for? You're finished with this prize affair. The understanding was that we'd get married the moment you were through with that."

"Whose understanding, Mary?"

"Oh, ours, I think . . . yours and mine," said she, dropping her lids quickly over flushed, accusing eyes. "I get my new car tomorrow. We could jaunt off in that."

The music of the dance starting anew, Mary rose, reaching her hand to him. She was an intriguing dancer. She sang softly in a sweet contralto.

"Why put it on? That's the question."

She said faintly: "You're jesting. It's rather trying when one isn't in the mood. But I suppose you're tired."

"Much later."

Suddenly as they were driving home, Mary asked: "Saxon—are we not to be married?"

CHAPTER LXXI.

MARY EUNICE, in the coupe beside him, leaned forward and amiably rouged her lips. "I'd like a direct answer, if you don't mind."

"Why speak of marriage at midnight, since nothing can be done about it till morning anyhow?"

"I ask because I abhor uncertainty."

"Why, my dear, uncertainty is the very pulse of love. That's why marriage is such a disaster. In removing the suspense, it kills the romance. Another case where the operation is a success, but the patient dies."

She was used to this light ridicule, and for her own reasons now chose to meet it.

When they reached the house and just as Saxon opened the door, Mary said: "Come in and have a look at the picture Jerry selected for my sitting room. I'm not sure that I like it, but she tells me to try it out as it's quite a gem."

* * *

She led the way up the long, old-fashioned stairway. At the landing she turned. In the subdued lamplight she appeared pale. Her emerald green dress—a color that she wore often, gave an unearthly glow to her satin skin and shadowed eyes. She reached her hands to his shoulders and with a soft, thrilled laugh moved into his arms. "You've not been up here. I had you in mind and the things you would like, all the time I was fixing up my rooms. You needn't speak in whispers, dear. We're quite alone."

Mary switched a light. The sitting room gave back a mellow radiance like a garden in moonlight. Soft apricot and green in the drapes; soft apricot in the walls.

They stood before the picture—an oil done by one of the younger artists in the school. Sunlight flowing over the graceful figures of girls bathing in a pool.

"Do you like it?"

"Very much."

"All that's necessary." Mary smiled and with a faint gesture of her fingers across his palm, she moved to the window. She stood here with her back to him. She had a willowy form and her bobbed hair went in a large, wind-blown wave.

* * *

He was conscious of her charm: conscious of a subtle incitement in this still, deserted house. Conscious of it, but detached like a spectator.

He remained before the picture. Delicate girls stepping into the sunlit pool. Their early-morning look. Jerry liked this picture. She would. Joy and freedom in it.

Without turning, Mary reached out her hand: "Saxon—come here. Did you ever see the bay so enchantingly busy?" She leaned her head against his shoulder and pointed down across the presidio trees to the dark gleaming waters. Battleships were in the harbor. A searchlight from these opened the night with glowing, transitory pictures—a tree on the Sausalito hills—a lumber schooner crawling seaward.

"I used to hate this view."

"Why?"

"It made me so lonely. I was so unsettled and unhappy before you came Saxon. I didn't dream what it could mean to be really loved." She let her head lie back against his shoulder and she now moved her cheek upward till her lips found and closed on his.

* * *

He remembered the first time she had done this; his warm, thrilled astonishment. His quick, boyish response. But he was used to the caress. It left him cold—stirred a sudden impatience.

"Kiss me! That's better. We've had delightful times, Saxon?"

"Very."

"You'd miss me, wouldn't you?"

"Naturally."

"Yes, after this year that has meant so much to both of us. Saxon, have I meant very much to you?"

"Why the dying gladiator speech, Mary?"

"Answer me, first! Have I meant much to you?"

"As you say, it's been delightful."

"When you told me you loved me the way that you did, you meant it?"

In the shadows he couldn't see her face—but her tone and her dreaming manner chafed him. It was late and he didn't want the opportunity she seemed offering.

"I always mean what I say while I'm saying it, Mary. I like you and your pictures and this lovely view—but it's a bit late to dilate on all these various charms." He gave her a teasing kiss and moved to the table where his hat lay.

"You're not going, are you?"

"I thought," said he, grinning, "that that would be in order since it's 1 o'clock in the morning."

"One o'clock in the morning isn't exactly a celebration, is it, after seven months—nearly that—of solitary confinement. Saxon—do you realize I've been looking forward to the finish of your plans all this time?"

"Mary, dear—"

"No—" she brushed his hand aside and stood resting on the arm of a chair, her head downcast.

"Mary—what did you want—what did you plan on for tonight?"

"For one thing," she answered quietly, "I wanted to get things definitely settled."

"Like what?"

"You and I!" She came up and with a smile took his hand. "Sit down a moment. Saxon—the folks are going away next week. They're going to the islands and to China. They'll be gone six months. They say I've got to go with them. Father just becomes more and more tyrannical."

"Not exactly a punishment, is it? Nice long sea voyage like that."

Veritzen Gives Mary Another Chance, but Imposes Secret Conditions

LILLIAN interrupted Mary as she quoted Philip Veritzen's statement that her story of the masked dancer was not news to him.

"Will you say that again, Mary?" she asked. "I want the gentleman's exact words on that point."

Mary looked puzzled, but dutifully repeated the words.

"He said, 'It may interest you to know that your story is not news to me.'"

"Humph!" Lillian commented cryptically. "Go on, Mary. What did you say to him when he sprang that on you?"

"I didn't say anything," Mary answered. "I was too absolutely flattened out. I just sat there and stared at him, and pretty soon he began to talk, slow, soft-voiced, but deadly, if you know what I mean." She looked at us uncertainly.

"Indeed, I know," Lillian assured her. "I've known Phil Veritzen's little ways for more years than I care to remember."

"He said," Mary went on, "that he made it his business to keep track of the girls to whom he meant to give a high place in his organization, and that he always knew anything that happened to them.

"'I would have dismissed you at once,' he told me, 'if you had not been so ill, and if you had not been recommended to me by Mrs. Graham and my old friend, Mrs. Underwood.'"

"Thanks for the buggy-ride," Lillian commented. "I hope our gentle influence is still affecting our friend."

"I think it must be," Mary answered, "for after reading me a lecture a mile long which I fully deserved and was glad to get, he said that if I—fulfilled certain conditions—and gave him my word of honor not to break any of his rules again, he would forget all about what I had told him, and permit me to take up my studies again in the fall."

"My word!" Lillian was suddenly vehement. "Philip Veritzen going back on his own Medes and Persian decrees! Mary, you're the luckiest girl in the world. Frankly, although I didn't tell your Auntie so, nor of course did I mention it to you, I didn't believe you had a chance in the world."

"Neither did I," Mary said quietly, and I studied her face closely as she spoke. There was in it nothing of the jubilant exaltation which her news should have caused, and I had a sudden premonition of something radically wrong.

"What were the 'certain conditions' you are to fulfill, Mary?" I asked.

Her face was suddenly suffused with scarlet.

"I can't tell you," she said. "He told me I mustn't tell anyone what they were. Oh, there's nothing wrong with them, nothing I couldn't tell you if he were willing, but they're the craziest lot of dope I ever head of. But I'm going through with 'em. I've thrown a lot of con around about being 'game' and now there's nothing else for me to do except stand up and take my medicine. So if you see me acting sort of crazy sometimes, please don't say anything to me about it. I'm likely to break down and bawl right before company."

There was a distinct quaver in her voice as she finished. It did not take a keen observer to see that she was due for a storm of tears at any minute. I rose abruptly.

"All right, Mary," I said carelessly. "We'll remember. And now, I think you'd better go up to your room and lie down for awhile. Call me if you want anything. And, congratulations!"

"Thank you!" Mary choked, and turning, dashed for the door.

THE SUN TELEGRAPH
PITTSBURGH'S BEST DAILY

Scattered all over the city, news stands, newsboys and newsdealers always have the Sun-Telegraph on hand, two cents daily, 10 cents Sunday. If more convenient for you, call the Sun-Tele circulation department, GRant 6500.

A Department Store of Knowledge and Entertainment

His Daily Comment

Famous Throughout Nation and City

James J. Long

James J. Long, favorite of Pittsburgh as a sports authority, a writer of all sports, is known in the most vigorous sports city of the world for his unfailing good humor, his interesting opinions, his two-sided reflection on all sport events and issues. Just look at the sport page—he'll be there every day.

"Bunts" and "Chilly Sauce"

Chilly Doyle

Besides his daily reports of the game are distinctive trade marks of Chilly Doyle's baseball knowledge and his distinguished place among sport writers. That Sports Final Edition of the Sun-Tele every day the Pirates play, is alone worth the two cents. Watch for "Bunts" and the score in the Sports Final—always "first with the latest."

Harry Keck

Harry Keck

Ingenious sports editor and boxing expert writes his column of opinions on the various sports, all the while presenting Pittsburgh and the county's sports fans with the snappiest, most alert sporting section in state and city. Have you ever met Harry Keck? He appears on the sport pages of the Sun-Tele every day.

Havey J. Boyle

Havey J. Boyle

Just a local boy, who used to be a sporting editor, on the inside looking out, is Havey J. Boyle. Deciding he wanted to be on the outside looking into things for a while, he now travels the pavements of Pittsburgh (now and then detouring through an alley) and tells about the folks he meets, the pictures his keen eyes see on the "Sidewalks of Pittsburgh." He does the walking. All the fans need to do is turn to Page 1, Second Section, of the Sun-Tele department of entertainment. He's there every day.

For Women and Misses

While Helen Rowland, master writer on that old-fashioned but always modern topic—Love—writes for men as well, women and misses find her clear epigrams fresh and concise and effective. Her sparkling style refreshes the discussion of domestic issues. You'll meet her every day on one of the two women's pages.

Nearby, at a counter not far distant, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, nationally known medico, writes the most instructive of all columns on illness—and more important, how to keep well.

For a change from the serious or semi-serious to the novel and humorous, an adjoining aisle will show Merely Margy, an Awfully Sweet Girl, who smart cracks (by Lloyd Mayer) to the drawings of the celebrated John Held, Jr.

Fay King, artist, humorist, and student of life, often draws into one sketch a great sermon on life. Nell Brinkley, mistress of a fantastic style distinct to herself; these are just a few of the attractions for women and misses. And also, don't forget to read Beatrice Fairfax, society and club news, unexcelled departments in the daily Sun-Tele.

Arthur Brisbane

Arthur Brisbane

Colossus of editorial writers, contributes his column, "Today," every day. You'll find it stimulating, full of mature comment, with up-to-date events contrasted with their prototypes in the past. Always on Page 1. And every day.

Will Rogers

Will Rogers

"All I know," says Will Rogers, the gum-chewing humorous philosopher who has taken Mark Twain's place in American life, "Is what I read in the newspapers." His daily wise-crack is yours for the asking—if you ask for the Sun-Tele. He's in there every day.

B. C. Forbes

B. C. Forbes

The financial critic who writes cleverly, effectively, simply, so that banker and financier, miner and clerk can appreciate what's going on in the world of finance. That's B. C. Forbes, whose column of financial comment is published every day in the Sun-Tele. Just look for the financial page—he'll be there.

O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

You have to follow O. O. McIntyre through the maze of streets of New York if you would be apprenticed to life. He sees the rosy, the sad, the quaint quirks of human nature at every step. Whatever he sees, he gives the touch, the touch of the gifted. It's colorful. Always to be found, every day, on the editorial page, the last page of the Sun-Tele.

Two Stolen Idols

Begins Monday, May 14

By Frank L. Packard, noted author, this great story holds Mystery, Thrills, Primitive Love. It is an Oriental Mystery story with icy daggers hanging in the air; vicious Mongolians in the Chinese slave traffic; white men, strong and brave; white women, fair—women to be loved. It begins Monday, May 14, in the Sun-Tele. Watch for it. You'll enjoy it.

for the entire family

Bargains simply mean things that are worth while, while their cost is reduced far beyond the level of their quality. And in that class are the feature strips in the Sun-Telegraph comic sections. See this department for:

Bulls Still in the Saddle; Political Scare Likely

By B. C. FORBES

AGAIN this week stocks reached new peaks. That the bulls have demonstrated amazing power and that they have succeeded in attracting a very large public following, cannot be gainsaid. All bull markets in the past have had an end. So will this one, don't forget.

HERE'S a letter from a presidential candidate who has already been nominated, namely, Norman Thomas, of the Socialist party:

"A friend has just called to my attention your article of Friday, April 20, headed 'Reforms Socialists Urge.'

"I take it that the things you and I want are very different and that, whether we happen to want some of the same things it is for rather different reasons. Nevertheless, I should like to take advantage of this opportunity to thank you for the dispassionate way in which you have summarized our position and the fair way you have commented on it without the rather nasty misrepresentation to which we have grown somewhat accustomed.

"Believe me, sincerely yours,
"NORMAN THOMAS,
"Executive Director."

MR. THOMAS is executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, whose object is: "Education for a new social order based on production for use and not for profit."

That order is a long, long way off.

NOW that popular stocks are returning a dividend yield less than the income obtainable on bonds, it might not be unwise to invest some of your funds in bonds to await the day when the already extraordinarily protracted boom in stocks is ended.

SOME time ago the suggestion was made here that good oil stocks and numbers of utilities looked most attractive, because they had not received the violent attention of the professional operators. The recent advance in these two groups has been substantial. Should the general market tumble, they doubtless would be affected to some extent. But they are unlikely to fall as much as issues which have been daringly boomed. Oil will not always be in oversupply.

The same comment can be made concerning rubber, now selling below cost of production.

YOU can count upon plenty of new foreign issues in this market. Don't pick them rashly.

"WE are looking forward to the greatest tourist season in the history of the Pacific Coast," declares James A. Callahan, of the San Francisco Examiner, who has been visiting New York. "Abundant rains assure our valleys of marvelous fruit crops. Trans-bay localities experienced a slight depression during the winter, but this has passed. A great deal of building is going on in San Francisco and also in Oakland."

WALL STREET always counts upon at least one political scare in a presidential year. One excuse is as good as another. Assuming that Gov. Smith is nominated the cry will probably be raised at some stage that everything points toward his election. And that would pave the way for all the usual thunderings about the unsettlement inevitably attendant upon a switch in the administration from Republican to Democratic. Remember that there still are bears in the stock market who are ready to seize any stick within reach to whack the bulls.

THE Philadelphia reserve bank sends encouraging reports concerning business in that territory.

IF America hopes to maintain a place in international shipping, it is high time that steps were taken looking towards the building of new ships and the bringing up-to-date of existing ones. We haven't built a ship for foreign trade in a decade. Which means that those under the American flag are all aging—twenty years is figured as the limit of a ship's effective life. Other maritime nations are going ahead building ships of greater speed and greater economy than ours and building them, incidentally, at one-half the cost or less.

Are American citizens satisfied to see American ships disappear completely from the oceans of the world?

BUSINESS results during the second quarter promise to be a little better than they were in the first quarter.

Stock Exchanges Close in Order To Catch Up

The New York Stock Exchange, the New York Curb, the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange and other leading securities markets throughout the country are closed today in accordance with the action of the New York exchange governors in ordering a suspension of trading in that market to permit brokerage offices to catch up with enormous volume of clerical work, which has piled up over the last two months. Brokers' offices will be open for conduct of routine business apart from buying and selling of securities. The commodity markets and banks will be in operation as usual. The exchanges will open at the customary hours Monday.

PRODUCE MARKET

Trading at the local wholesale produce district for practically all lines of fruit and vegetables was dull today. The quotations on fruit and vegetables were about unchanged.

The poultry market closed easy at unchanged quotations. Supplies were liberal and the demand was fair.

The egg market was firm at the quotations listed. Butter was easy. Cheese was steady. The quotations on these markets were unchanged.

Car lot supplies were liberal, a total of 510 cars being on track. Arrivals included 16 cars of apples, 1 beans, 1 cabbage, 2 carrots, 2 cauliflower, 23 lettuce, 4 onions, 13 oranges, 40 potatoes, 2 sweet potatoes, 3 tomatoes and 1 peas.

THINKS BARRACKS DEMORALIZING

The lack of privacy in the striking miners' barracks is "almost a scandal," Horace F. Baker, president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, told 300 women at the College Club yesterday. What goes on in one family can be heard through the thin partitions by the families in the adjoining apartments, Baker said, and the effect on the children is bound to be demoralizing.

If the coal companies were to settle with the union, 10,000 nonunion miners in the Pittsburgh district would be thrown out of work, according to Baker, and the city would be confronted with a grave social problem.

There will be business failures, mergers and legislation before the trouble is settled, in his opinion. He suggested that a government certificate of public necessity be required before a coal mine could be opened.

Baker described John L. Lewis, international president of the miners' union, as a brave man who has overplayed his hand.

"He is licked," he said, "but doesn't know it."

Senator Frank R. Gooding, a leader in the Senate investigation, is honest and straightforward, in Baker's opinion, but is biased. He said he did not believe that John Brophy, leader of the insurgent element in the union, was connected with the I. W. W.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

OFFICE OF
TREASURER OF ALLEGHENY COUNTY,
PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

In pursuance of the 21st section of an "Act relating to Allegheny county," approved the 1st day of May, 1861, and of the amendment to said section, approved the 30th day of March, A. D. 1866, I do hereby give notice that the duplicates for the several wards of the cities of Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton, boroughs and townships, will be open, and I will be prepared to receive the county, poor, road, bond interest, personal property and park taxes for the year 1928 on May 1st. Said taxes may be paid during the months of May, June and July at 5% discount, during August at face, 10% penalty being added on and after September 1st.

Statements will be furnished promptly upon written request, if given name, location by ward in the cities of Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Duquesne or Clairton, or by boroughs or townships. If statement of Personal Property or Occupation Tax is desired, please give street address also.

Use of the mail is advised for requesting statements and in making payments of taxes. Remittance may be made by bank draft, certified check, or postoffice money order (payable to John Francies, County Treasurer), accompanied by stamped and addressed envelope for return of tax statement or receipt.

JOHN FRANCIES,
County Treasurer.

ITALIANS HERE TO ORGANIZE NEW BANK

Formation of an Italian bank in Pittsburgh, backed by a group of leading Italian business and professional men and modeled somewhat after the Giannini organization in California, is in progress and the project will be publicly launched at a dinner in the Hotel Schenley next Wednesday evening. It will be known as the Italian Bank and Trust Company.

The backers believe that the undertaking can be realized with a capital of $500,000, a surplus of $100,000 and a reserve of $50,000, and to this end are inviting the Italians of this city and the immediate vicinity to become stockholders of the institution.

Full protection is afforded subscribers during the organization by an agreement whereby the Pennsylvania Trust Company, as trustee, is authorized to return all payments with interest if the organization is not completed by February 27, 1929.

ITALIANS INTERESTED

The executive, or organization, committee is composed of Mr. Ortale, as chairman; G. A. Pivirotto, vice chairman; Nunzio Battaglia, D. Carapellucci, A. Iacovetti, Girard M. Sisca and S. Sunseri, all well-known business men and active in the affairs of the various Italian communities. There is also an advisory committee of which John A. Fugassi is chairman and numbering among its members John J. Verona and M. A. Musmanno. The general committee is also composed of well-known Italian business and professional men representing all sections of Pittsburgh, among whom is the Rev. Father Bonaventura Piscopo, who is one of the most widely known Italian clergymen in Western Pennsylvania.

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF PITTSBURGH
3½% GOLD BONDS

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received by G. W. Gerwig, Secretary, in the office of the Board of Public Education, 725 Fulton Building, Pittsburgh, until 3 o'clock P. M., May 22d, for One Million Five Hundred Thousand ($1,500,000.00) Dollars school loan for the purpose of raising the necessary funds for procuring sites and erecting and equipping buildings and additions for elementary and high schools in said School District under the provisions of An Act of Assembly entitled: "An Act to establish a public school system in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, etc.," on conditions as follows:

The bonds are serial, with maturities beginning on the first day of May, 1929, and annually thereafter, until and including May 1st, 1958.

Bonds will be in denomination of $1,000 in common form, payable principal and interest in gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness. Said bonds may be registered and the principal sum will bear interest at the rate of three and one-half per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of May and November, the first payment of interest to be on the first day of November, 1928; said loan and interest are payable free from all taxes in Pennsylvania, and is free from Federal Income Tax.

The School District of Pittsburgh will submit a bid for the entire issue and, if awarded, said bonds will be purchased for the Sinking Funds, Pension Fund and Fire Insurance Fund of the School District.

PROPOSALS MUST BE UNCONDITIONAL AND MADE UPON A PRESCRIBED FORM OF BLANKS, TO BE OBTAINED UPON APPLICATION AT THE OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY.

No bid, except the bid of the School District, will be considered unless accompanied by a certified check drawn to the order of the Treasurer of the School District of Pittsburgh for two per centum of the par value of the bonds bid for.

Checks accompanying unaccepted bids will be returned to the bidders promptly. Checks of successful bidders will be held until the last of the bonds bid for by the depositor has been taken and paid for. No interest allowed on check until acceptance of bid, and thereafter interest will be allowed thereon at three and one-half per centum per annum.

Settlement in full for the loan awarded must be made with the School Treasurer on or before May 28, 1928, at three o'clock P. M., and shall include payment of accrued interest from May 1st, 1928, to day of settlement.

The Board of Public Education has the right to reject any or all proposals, or award any portion of the loan, as it may deem best for the interest of the School District of Pittsburgh.

The proceedings for this loan and the legality of the issue have been approved by J. Rodgers McCreery, Esq., of Pittsburgh, and a copy of his letter attesting legality may be had on application.

THE BOARD OF PUBLIC EDUCATION
MARCUS AARON, President.
G. W. GERWIG, Secretary.
JOHN H. HENDERSON, School Controller.

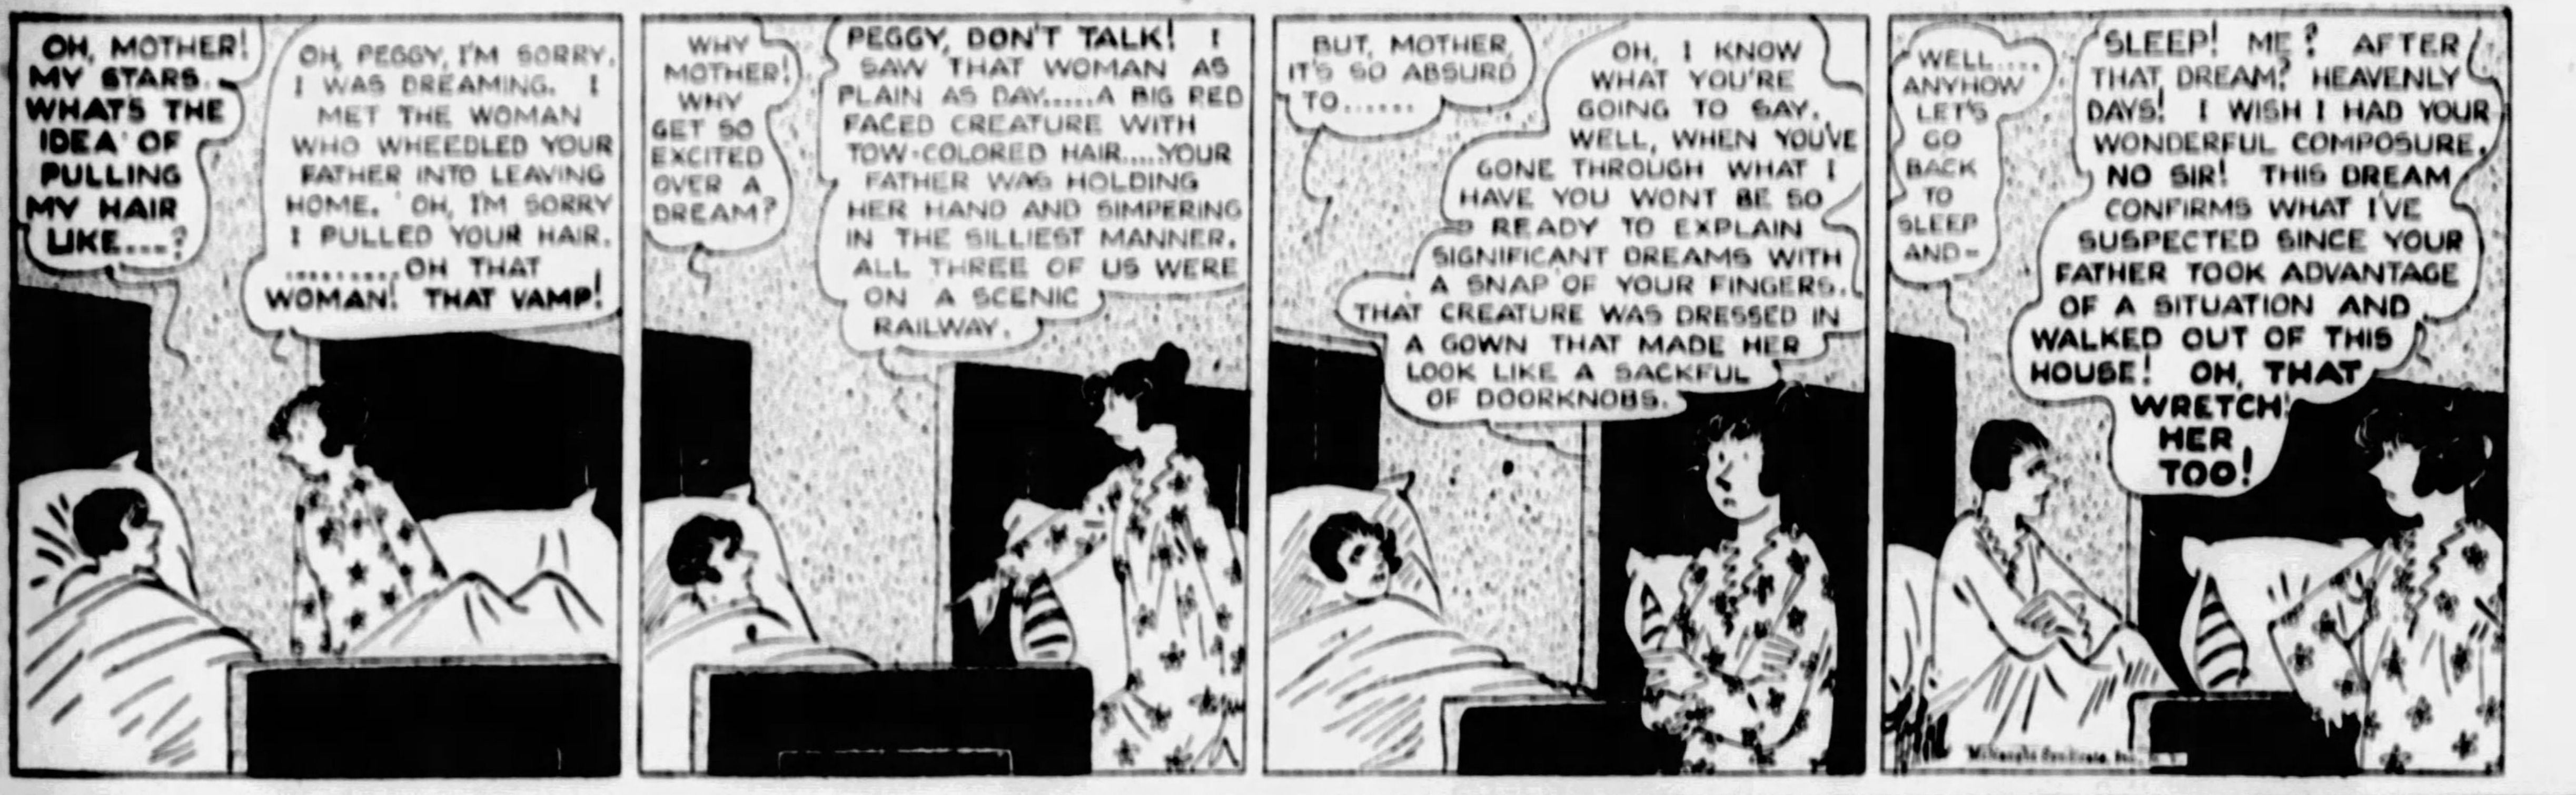
THE BUNGLE FAMILY . . . . A Convincing Dream



OH, MOTHER! MY STARS - WHATS THE IDEA OF PULLING MY HAIR LIKE...?
OH, PEGGY, I'M SORRY. I WAS DREAMING. I MET THE WOMAN WHO WHEEDLED YOUR FATHER INTO LEAVING HOME. OH, I'M SORRY I PULLED YOUR HAIR. ....OH THAT WOMAN! THAT VAMP!
WHY MOTHER! WHY GET SO EXCITED OVER A DREAM?
PEGGY, DON'T TALK! I SAW THAT WOMAN AS PLAIN AS DAY.....A BIG RED FACED CREATURE WITH TOW-COLORED HAIR.....YOUR FATHER WAS HOLDING HER HAND AND SIMPERING IN THE SILLIEST MANNER. ALL THREE OF US WERE ON A SCENIC RAILWAY.
BUT, MOTHER, IT'S SO ABSURD TO......
OH, I KNOW WHAT YOU'RE GOING TO SAY. WELL, WHEN YOU'VE GONE THROUGH WHAT I HAVE YOU WONT BE SO READY TO EXPLAIN SIGNIFICANT DREAMS WITH A SNAP OF YOUR FINGERS. THAT CREATURE WAS DRESSED IN A GOWN THAT MADE HER LOOK LIKE A SACKFUL OF DOORKNOBS.
WELL.... ANYHOW LET'S GO BACK TO SLEEP AND-
SLEEP! ME? AFTER THAT DREAM? HEAVENLY DAYS! I WISH I HAD YOUR WONDERFUL COMPOSURE. NO SIR! THIS DREAM CONFIRMS WHAT I'VE SUSPECTED SINCE YOUR FATHER TOOK ADVANTAGE OF A SITUATION AND WALKED OUT OF THIS HOUSE! OH, THAT WRETCH! HER TOO!

THE SUN-TELE

"'I wonder if I can really tell the difference when blindfolded,' was my first thought when invited to make this test.

"After having four newspapers read to me aloud, one after the other, I discovered there was one that did not irritate the throat.

"This proved to be The Sun-Tele. I hope I shall be able to buy this newspaper on the train . . . it has a delightful aroma which to me is very important."

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

I'll leave the State until this thing is settled.

Let us turn to the Winfield, Iowa, Beacon for today's text—

"Rev. Hankins and wife were over Monday from Wapello to look arter some business, and Ben dropped in long enough to say 'hello.' Says that Bro. Hawkins of the Republican is in Des Moines, getting the 'Four Square' gospel off of Aime McPherson. We say, why go to Des Moines for what the three preachers right in Wapello furnish. True, they do not call it 'Four Square,' but a rose by any other name would smell as sweet. Still a trip to Des Moines and a chance to see and hear this Los Angeles evangelist exercised a sort of a pull that R. G. could not resist."

The Government wants 200,000 men to go to citizens' military training camps this summer.

Every day it looks more and more like war with Chicago.

Did you read about the authorities taking photographs at the polls to get evidence against Chicago repeaters?

"All they need do," says Don Herold, "is make six prints from one negative."

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Sir:

Before marrying I had reason to believe that my wife was quite wealthy. However, I later discovered she had nothing. During one of our tilts I plainly told her in a sarcastic manner that I thought she was well off before I married her. Imagine my embarrassment when she replied that she was, but did not have sense enough to know it.

JOHN, I'VE DECIDED WE'RE GOING TO HAVE THE FINEST GARDEN ON THE BLOCK THIS YEAR— TWICE AS BIG AS THE ONE WE PLANTED LAST YEAR!
IS THAT SO?! - WHERE DO YOU GET THAT WE STUFF?
WHO DID ALL THE WORK ON THE GARDEN LAST YEAR? - I DID! - WHO SPADED IT? - I DID! - WHO PLANTED IT? - I DID! - WHO WEEDED IT? - I DID! - WHO - THAT'S O, DEAR.
YOU BET IT'S SO! - AND BEFORE WE DECIDE ABOUT ANY OTHER GARDEN I'M GOING TO THINK IT OVER CERTAINLY, DEAR.
- AND NOW THAT YOU'VE THOUGHT IT OVER, WHEN WILL WE START SPADING?

BUGS BAER Says

LINDBERGH flew down to Washington this week to give his famous puddle jumper to the Smithsonian Institution.

It will be varnished, tagged and planted in a glass case alongside of an Egyptian king with plenty of past but no future.

We always feel guilty in the third scientific degree when a curator of crytogeology looks at us with specification in his eyes.

ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Therefore, we congratulate Lindbergh in escaping before they stuffed him.

Anybody who can go into the Smithsonian Institution and get away without sawdust in his pocket or pins in his wings is fortunate.

If the Smithsonian students of suspended animation had discovered that Lindy was a five-toed aviator they would have tossed a butterfly net over his head and pressed him between the leaves of the January issue of the National Geographic.

The fact that Lindy came out without a coat of varnish or a plank on his back is proof that he needs no navigating instruments, compass or parachute when he goes into danger.

We hope that Lindy lost nothing on his last trip with his machine. Those Smithsonian boys are good taxidermists, but sometimes they lose one of your shinbones or an ear.

Unsatisfied

The baby was crying.

Mother (in another room): "What's the matter?"

Nurse: "He wants a—"

"Never mind what he wants. Give it to him."

In a few minutes the baby's cries grew louder.

Mother: "Why don't you give him what he wants?"

Nurse: "I did, mum. It was a wasp."

Poisonous Words

"How are Scrappington and his wife getting on?"

"Worse than ever. Now that mushrooms are plentiful, they are eating large quantities."

"What for?"

"Well, each is hoping that the other will swallow a toadstool."

Unhappily Put

They were sitting together in the moonlight.

"And," said the girl bravely, "if poverty comes, we will face it together."

"Ah, dearest," he replied, "the mere sight of your face would scare the wolf away."

And ever since he has been wondering why she returned his ring.

Object of Envy

Two Irishmen were discussing a fellow workman—an Englishman.

"Work! He's a grand worker—an' why wouldn't he be? Shure, he never stops atin'. Breakfast an' lunch an' tea, an' dinner an' sandwiches in his pocket. Och! a cow between two bread vans would be nothin' to that fellow!"

Matter of Opinion

"There is nothing more unsatisfactory than a boarding house breakfast," growled the chronic grumbler.

"Oh, I don't know," rejoined the impressionable young man. "Did you ever get a kiss from a pretty girl over the telephone?"

Cruelty

"My mother and father celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary the other day. They killed a pig in honor of the occasion."

"Why kill an innocent pig for what happened 25 years ago?"

State Should Find Out About Power Slush Fund

Speedy verification of the charge made editorially by The Sun-Telegraph recently that money paid by consumers of electric power is being used against them comes via Washington. A power slush fund of $50,000, used in Harrisburg to defeat "giant power" legislation in Pennsylvania, has been uncovered by the Federal Trade Commission.

The Pennsylvania Electric Association, through its "public policy committee," is admitted by the chairman of the committee to have employed that amount in "lobbying." Much of the money was spent secretly, it has been shown, but there was no revelation as to where more than $20,000 of the slush fund had gone, except to state that it was all "honorably and lawfully" expended.

All of that $50,000 was paid by users of electricity. It was spent for the purpose of influencing votes of legislators on bills pending in the Assembly. The motive was to secure the position of members of the Pennsylvania Electric Association in their control of power in the state and to protect them against possible competition through the operation of the "giant power" project.

In all likelihood there could have been much honest opposition against the latter proposal, and there no doubt was, but the possibility it contained for great economic advantage to the state should not have been destroyed by shooting from ambush.

There seems to be in the disclosures in Washington a good deal for Gov. Fisher and Attorney General Baldridge to consider.

Town Hall Indorsement Official Notice to Board

The Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh and the Civic Club of Allegheny County have gone on record in favor of the Town Hall project. Each organization has voted in favor of the county commissioners including in the coming improvement bond issue funds for the erection of such a structure.

The action of these organizations is in line with public sentiment. At the Town Hall dinner held last winter, attended by hundreds of prominent persons from all parts of the county, there was not a dissenting voice raised against the proposal to give Allegheny county a building appropriate to the community's need for a suitable temple of culture, entertainment and civic advancement.

All recognize that we are behind other great communities in this matter, and the county commissioners are aware of the state of public opinion. The action of the Chamber of Commerce and the Civic Club gives the board of commissioners official knowledge of the desires of members of two prominent organizations.

Now that these two have led the way, many other bodies likely will go on record also.

No Decision on Blue Law Can Make It American

Attorney General Thomas J. Baldridge's petition to permit the state to intervene in the appeal to the Superior Court in the blue law cases based on Sunday concerts in Pittsburgh is significant. Fined by an alderman, members of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society took their case to a county court, which decided Sunday concerts did not come within the intent of the act of 1794 known as the blue law. This decision, appealed by the Sabbath Association, is before the Superior Court, and the state wishes to become a participant in order that the decision may be a guide to uniform enforcement of the law throughout the commonwealth.

Such a precedent is desirable, but, even though there be a thousand precedents, the blue law never will be RIGHT. And because of that fact it will constantly invite violations even by people who are law-abiding in intent. They scorn it because it is unfair, un-American, unnecessary. It is a relic of the dark ages. So long as it is enforced, the rich man will have his Sunday afternoon golf and Sunday evening movies at his clubs, while the poor man and his family are denied sane recreational and amusement privileges on that day.

No matter what the decision of the court may be, it is up to the people to see that the legislature solves the matter definitely on the side of justice by repealing the act of 1794 entirely or amending it to conform to modern ideas.

We Moderns

Some of Us Might Wear a Few More Clothes.

"I'VE ONLY GOT TO PUT MY HAT ON!"

This is a picture of a charming modern ingenue according to the London Sketch.

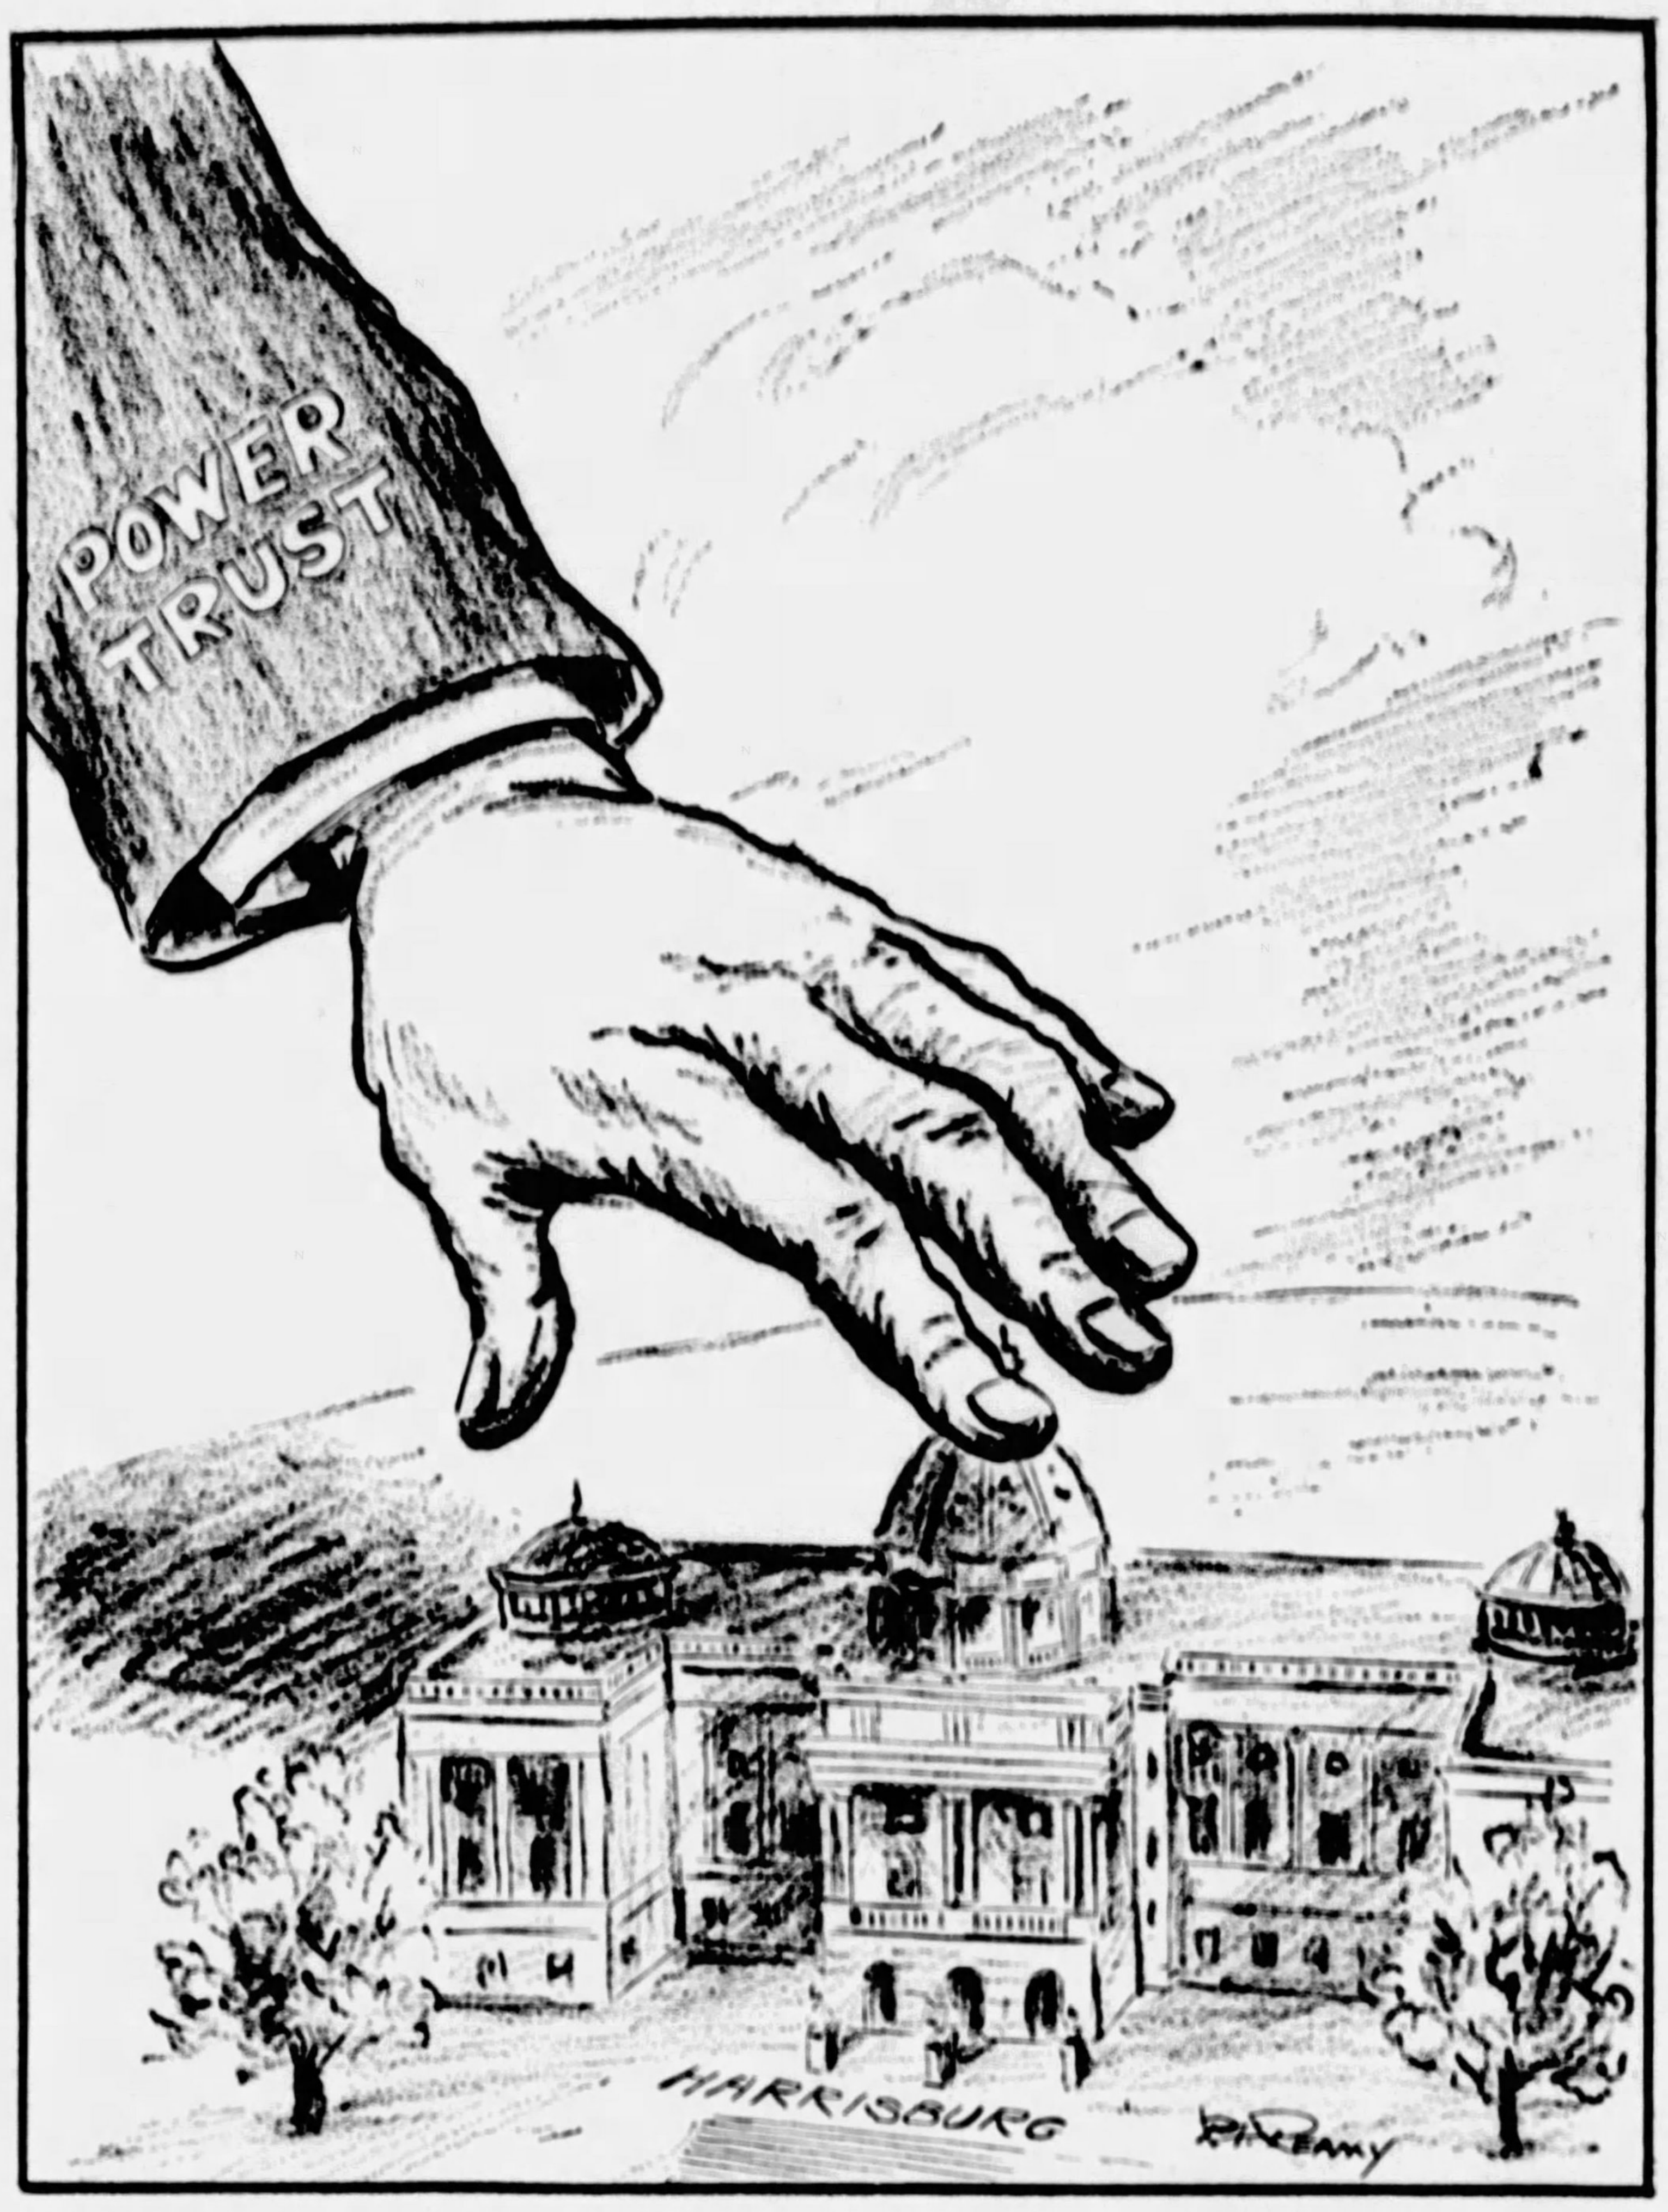
Twenty years ago this charming young lady, who now appears with her modern equipment, telephone, cigarets and lipstick, would have lacked the telephone, the cigaret and lipstick, and would have said, "Dear me; it will take me an hour to get ready."

But now, to an old-fashioned editorial mind, something seems lacking in this deshabille young lady. She needs a hat, perhaps shoes—no stockings are necessary—and she will be ready for the party.

WE MODERNS have our good points. We crowd a good deal into one day, and the next morning up to about five.

But WE MODERNS will pay for it later, and wish we had more common sense.

IN PENNSYLVANIA, TOO!



Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Friar Bacon

THERE is much talk again of Roger Bacon and his ciphers. The late Professor Newbold, of Pennsylvania University, discovered a key to the ciphers of the "Wonderful Doctor" (Doctor Mirabilis), which has been hidden for more than six centuries on the last page of an old manuscript found in 1912 in an ancient Italian castle. But Professor Newbold died before he had time to translate more than a very little of the manuscript, which is supposed to have been written by the old friar while in prison during fourteen years for offending the Church.

But Roger Bacon's offenses to the Church are of little interest, compared with the question of what he knew about the laws of nature. The manuscript is believed to contain things that he did not dare to put into plain language.

• • •

What a strange ostrich superstition has made of man, keeping his head buried in the sands of ignorance lest he should see the light of knowledge! The monkish orders were too cunning simply to spike the enemy's guns; instead, they turned them and fired them against their inventors. Thus, as Roger Bacon's fame at Oxford spread on account of his discoveries in natural law, they accused him of working miracles, only they called them "black" miracles.

The reputation of practitioner of "black arts" which they thus fixed upon him has, in a way, lasted more than six hundred years. It has served a good turn in modern romance writers. Thus, Bulwer Lytton's famous short story, "The House and the Brain," one of the most thrilling ghost stories ever written, is based on "Friar Bacon's" alleged necromantic powers.

• • •

It is curious that more than three hundred years after his death another Bacon—Francis Bacon—not descendent from Roger—gained undying fame for views of science and nature that seem, in a way, a revival and expansion of what the first one taught. Each insisted upon the domination of experiment in scientific investigation. Roger Bacon illustrated his doctrines with, among other things, an investigation of the nature and cause of the rainbow, which he very clearly demonstrated. This would naturally have been an offense to the theologians of his day, who insisted on the sacredness of the story that God set "His bow" in the sky as a promise to Noah that there should be no second deluge.

The latest scientific speculation assures us that matter is only energy under lock and key in the prison of the atom. Friar Bacon said that all natural phenomena are produced by the interaction of virtus (force or energy) and matter, "the result being the thing known." After all, considering the disadvantages of his time and environment, the old friar does not appear so far behind the modern mathematical physicist, who, having discovered the electrons, now seems in danger of losing them.

• • •

In Bacon's day the public, if it did any thinking, thought in terms of theology. It did not try to understand him, but set him down for an unorthodox sorcerer. In our day people try to think in terms of science, but they take too literally what comes from the front, not understanding how far idealism enters into modern scientific speculation. But listen to Professor R. B. Lindsey:

"We build a hypothesis which seems to satisfy our longings for logical completeness, and then act toward our hypothesis as if it were reality, because it works. Yet we must never forget that this reality is of necessity only a transient one. New facts render old hypotheses untenable, the old reality yields to new reality, and so science progresses."

Lone Workers

IT IS unwise to write the folk back home about the importance of the position you hold in the city where you are located.

Perhaps you have a good position but it may not entitle you to a finely furnished office and that is what the town folk will expect when they come to see you.

If, when they call on you, they find you in a little 2x4 apartment or seated at a desk in a large room with many other workers, the report that goes home will be unfavorable.

In the little city from which you come, it is probable that the man holding an important job in a manufacturing plant had a private office commensurate with his position with the firm.

The small city person does not understand that more and more big business is doing away with private offices.

This is a point to be considered by the man moving from the small town to take a job in a larger place.

If he cannot concentrate and work to full advantage unless he is alone in an office he would better remain where he is.

Unless he goes to an unusually important position he must work in a room with many others.

The Rhyming Optimist

At Judith's Smile

THOUGH days are cold and grim,
Flowers faded, skies grow dim
For mile on mile,
Yet, strangely, once again
Earth blooms as with Spring's train
At Judith's smile.

Hope may have waned and died
For all its dreams denied
A weary while,
But its reviving green
Like new-sprung grass is seen
At Judith's smile.

And so I have no fear
When seasons dull and drear
Before me file.
While sun and stars endure
My cares will all find cure
In Judith's smile.

Tales that are Told

G-G-Ghosts!

A HOUSE agent had a farm on his books which was supposed to be haunted, and to prove rumor wrong he decided to engage a man to stay there for one night.

The following day he was up early and went round to see how the man had fared. But the man was not to be found. On the lawn he discovered the remains of a window, sash and shutter, completely wrecked, but of the watchman there was no sign.

Four days later the house agent came across him tramping along a country lane three miles away.

"Hallo, George," he cried. "Where have you been all this time?"

The man wiped the perspiration from his brow.

"Boss," he replied, "I've been coming back."

The Brute

"Whatever is the matter, Enid?" she asked.

Enid's face grew longer than ever as she answered between sobs:

"I've broken off my engagement with Ernest."

"Never mind, dear," said Ethel, comfortingly. "He is certain to come round and patch it up with you before long."

"I don't think so," replied Enid. "You see, I wrote and told him never to see me or write to me again. And," she added, vehemently, "he hasn't even been nice enough to answer my letter."

Verification

"YOU look like a fool!" thundered the angry parent to his son just returned from college. "More and more like a conceited, hare-brained, helpless fool every year."

Just then the manager of the firm entered his employer's private office and saw the youth.

"Hallo, Mr. George! Back again, eh? You look more and more like your father every time I see you."

The youth brightened.

"Yes, he replied, looking cheerfully at his parent, "the g'v'nor's just been telling me so."

"Well," said the spokesman of the delegation, "that depends on 'ow badly you're 'urt."—London Tit-Bits.

Education

DR. LEIGH, president-elect of the new college for women at Bennington, Vt., gave as this experiment's central purpose the endeavor to fit the training of each student to her individual interests and needs.

That is what should be done for every American child. Until it shall have been well done our educational system will not be satisfactory.

We fall so far short of it now that many children get little or no education, many other children are held back from their natural progress because classmates are slow, and millions of normal children march in a lock-step instead of to their individual gait.

Vast as are the sums we spend on schools, we are only at the beginning of real education. We see in our best schools how infinite are the possibilities of improvement. We also see in them encouragement to press on.

It is because every poorly educated child in any part of our country is a liability of the nation that we need a Federal Department of Education, with ample funds to build up the weak places.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 5.—It has become a smart thing for celebrities to yawn at their public. Quite a number are writing of their untter boredom after a few years of popular approval. You are invited to believe they became glutted and yearn for solitude, ho-hum.

I have just hurled a magazine across the floor after reading the announcement of a lady author that press clippings about herself and work no longer interest her. She has stopped her subscriptions although graciously admitting she reads anything about herself if she happens to run across it.

On this point I am a pronounced meanie. I do not believe anyone is especially fatigued seeing his or her name in print. Modesty over achievement is, of course, becoming, but an entirely different phase of the matter. The desire to be considered favorably is as natural as breathing.

The person who attains celebrity, I imagine, finds that about 90 per cent of the joy is in the discussion it provokes among admirers. To say all the pleasure is in the accomplishment sounds nice, but is rather difficult to swallow.

Such men as Thomas A. Edison or Henry Ford have shown no violent distaste for publicity. Indeed there are very few men rising to great heights who haven't a press agent or a public relations such-and-such lurking in the background. Most reporters know all about the shrinking violets.

They have heard their naive prattle of the desire to be unhonored and unsung, but when the reporter starts to leave he is not surprised to hear: "Of course, I'd rather you would say nothing, but in case you do, take this." And he is slipped the favorite picture of the violet with a chin cupped in hand pose and soulful look.

New York supports a score of press clipping bureaus where rows of alert readers scan every publication in the world for reference to their clients. These bureaus are supported almost exclusively by celebrities in every field and it is no more than natural that this should be so.

* * *

Flowers are no longer sent in customary cardboard boxes as a rule. Flowers in baskets are the rat's rubbers, and the baskets cost more than the posies. One I noticed in a Madison avenue shop was priced at $45. They are making it tougher every day for galoots who wear trousers.

Several of the Coffee Pot palaces along Broadway are adding to their revenue by sale of sauer-kraut juice. It has won renown for being a quick remedial agent for the hang-over. One cup is said to whip up digestion, clear the head, harden the gums, and make everything perfectly dandy. Some soda fountains also dispense the pick-up.

* * *

The best hang-over story, dating back to the big wind, continues to be the one about the fellow nursing a headache built for a horse. A kitten walked across the room and seeing it the sufferer cried: "What are you doing, stamping around like that?"

* * *

The highest priced walking stick so far observed in the shop windows is one of pure rosewood with a curved handle of clear crystal. It sells for $240 and there is no guarantee it will not break if it falls from the hand. Yet the clerk said he had sold three.

An angle of prohibition is that with the passing of the barrooms the sales of canes fell off in New York. Owners do not lose them so readily. Thousands in the old days were left hanging to bar rails, but today they are seldom lost. The Knickerbocker Hotel had a large sized room filled with canes left by patrons of the bar when it put up its shutters.

* * *

No Broadway rendezvous, incidentally, has quite equaled the old Knickerbocker. Here one saw almost any day at lunch Caruso, Oscar Hammerstein and his peaked silk hat, Bet-a-Million Gates, Diamond Jim Brady, Tex Rickard, Arnold Rothstein, Wilson Mizner, the Duke of Manchester, Joe Weber and Lew Fields and scores of others who gave the White Way of that period its glamour.

The Green Cross

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A resolution has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Copeland, of New York, and a similar one in the House by Representative Evans, giving official recognition to the American Green Cross and providing $120,000 for this work.

The Green Cross has been actively functioning for the past five years protecting our forests, and having among its incorporators many of America's foremost citizens. It is a body with an educational program and represents a work that is sadly needed.

Too much attention cannot be given to the conservation of our forests and their intelligent use.

This fact has been called to our attention by a series of unprecedented disasters, floods, fire, drought, pestilence and famine which have destroyed hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of property and left devastation in their wake.

In the Mississippi Valley 700,000 homes were destroyed and 600,000 people made destitute by the flood last spring.

In the New England states over 100 lives were lost and much damage done by flood. Destructive cyclonic winds caused much loss of life around St. Louis.

Altogether thirty-four billion dollars and many thousands of American lives have been lost in these disasters. There is nothing of more widespread benefit to the people than flood control, farm relief, forest fire prevention and reforestation. This needed work is that to which the American Green Cross addresses itself.

Dr. Harvey Wiley says: "As we learn more of hygiene we understand better the relation between trees and health and the necessity of pure, clean air to be obtained from the forests."

We can live less than five weeks without food, less than five days without water and less than five minutes without air. All these necessities are practically dependent upon trees.

"The trees are as necessary to the earth as are capillaries to the body."

M. Jean Cabart declares that "the world is drifting toward becoming a huge desert swept by floods and tempests because of deforestation." He calls upon the governments of the world to cease their senseless destruction of trees and begin comprehensive policies of reforestation.

In the late Mississippi flood if the rainfall and snows had been retarded by the proper forestation the water which went down the main channel in three weeks would have taken six, flowing with only one-half the head.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

DR. CHARLES MAYO said that high heels shrink women's calves.

The middle-aged ones went out immediately and had a couple of layers of leather tacked on their heels.

Wellington Mix, of Chicago, carried a divorce in his pocket for five years and didn't tell his wife. But you can't fool even one woman all of the time, and she is having the decree set aside.

Judge William Gemmill, of Chicago, tells a story of a couple brought to him by the police. They had four children. The father had carried the marriage license around for seven years, always intending to get married, but, as he explained to the court, he never found time. He remedied the oversight at once and was released.

Women spend thirty-two billions of dollars, or four-fifths of all the money that passes over retail counters in the country every year. All the men do is produce the money. And many women chide American business men because they are "uninteresting." "All they talk is business," is their complaint. Having to produce thirty-two billions doesn't leave so much time for thinking up poetic ways to say things. But few women would choose between bunk and billions with their eyes closed.

Hazel Carrierre, of Worcester, Mass., sues Hugh Verineau for $5,000. He told the police she was missing and had her arrested as she was on her way to Vermont to be married, delaying the wedding.

He was the one who was missing. On both cylinders.

Miss Stella Willins has a record of 121 words per minute, the world's best among typists. Many a married man will "huh" and want to dispute her right, but she means on the typewriter, and not being married, the poor girl has to get rid of her words in some way.

Emma Lintz, of California, advertised for a husband to help her spend $100,000 inheritance. She got plenty of sweet letters, but decided to get the man who wrote and called her a "darn fool." And what do you guess he will call her after the wedding, with a start like that?

Margaret B. Benson, director of the women's division of the National Manufacturers Association, finds that the thing uppermost in the minds of women wage earners is to make some man fall in love with them.

And the more they earn, the easier it is.

They carried one girl from the floor in complete collapse out in Ocean Park, Cal., where a five-day dance marathon was in progress. Another girl, a red head, wore out three husky male partners and was still dancing. But how tired they'd be if they had to cook or bake or sew, or "tend the baby." And as for dish washing, oh, my dear!
